Under Brad's masterful handling the car flashed toward Boston. The speedometer needle crept up to 80 and Brad held it there. The speed was exhilarating, but Sheila had misgivings—well-founded, it proved.

CHAPTER 9

TRUDY WENDELL was aghast that one of her guests should leave so early. Sheila explained it wasn't early for her.

"It's Jane's fault, I'm sure," said Brad's sister. "I don't know what she did, but I'm sure you understand. Don't you?"

"I think I do," said Sheila. She couldn't blame Jane much. It was too obvious she was in love with Brad, even though she showed it in a queer way.

Brad opened the car-door. He'd changed cars. The new machine was more like what Sheila would have expected—a long, low, topless monster, glittering with nickel and chromium. Below the hood-vents, shining exhaust pipes leaped out and lost themselves under the chassis.

"Don't you want someone to drive you?" Trudy asked Brad as they were leaving. "Or is that all straightened out?"

Brad made some indistinguishable reply, and got in at the wheel. Sheila didn't pay much attention then. Later, the brief dialogue assumed more importance.

Brad slipped in the clutch, and the big car poured smoothly away. From the top of the drive, Sheila could look back and see the lights streaming from the windows of the Wendell mansion. A faint blast of music was wafted to them.

"In a hurry?" Brad questioned.

"I'm afraid so."

"What's it all about, anyway?" he asked, as they flashed out the lodge-gate onto a winding strip of asphalt. "Mickey looks big enough to take care of himself. And he's certainly no cripple."

Sheila tried to explain. But she realized she wasn't making it very clear. To Brad Talton, protected by wealth and influence, it was inconceivable that a man like Big Gus Mornick should hold such power to harm. Nor could he understand the lure of easy money to boys like Mickey—boys to whom life offered only a tedious struggle for a living, with all the odds against success. Big Gus perhaps could have made it clearer to

J. L. Lewis, Dubinsky in CIO Row

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (AP)—An apparently serious rift in the leadership of the Committee for Industrial Organization came to the surface today.

John L. Lewis, dynamic head of the CIO and the United Mine Workers of America, and David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, are the leaders involved.

Dubinsky asserts the CIO is responsible for the recent breakdown in peace negotiations between the CIO and the American Federation of Labor.

LEWIS REPLY BLUNT

Lewis was blunt in reply.

"Mr. Dubinsky, whom I esteem highly," he said, "seems to be giving an imitation of Eliza crossing the ice and looking backward like Lot's wife.

"I think he ought to finally decide whether he is flesh or fowl or good red herring."

Dubinsky also has demanded that negotiations with the AFL be resumed. He spoke at a special meeting of 1200 members of the executive boards of his local unions.

He did not mention Lewis by name, but said:

"No one man has a mortgage on the labor movement. The labor movement is not the property of any individual or group."

PILLAR OF CIO

Today when informed of what Lewis had said he declined to comment, but his office insisted there had been no break in friendly relationship.

Justice Cardozo Fails to Improve

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (AP)—Dr. John Paul Earnest, Jr., said today the condition of Associate Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo of the Supreme Court "is not quite so good this morning."

The justice has been ill for several weeks, suffering from la grippe and shingles. His condition has been complicated by heart attacks.

Dr. Earnest said he and three heart specialists would examine Cardozo later today.

Wife and Baby Son Missing

Husband In Collapse From Grief In Newburyport

NEWBURYPORT, Jan. 12.—A pretty young wife and her two months old son who was born last Armistice Day have been missing from their home on Market street for more than a week now, and the husband and father has collapsed from grief and worry, it was revealed by police here today.

Albert Gagnon, 21, returned to his modest apartment from his work in a silverware plant on January 2 to find a note in which his wife Elizabeth, 18, said she was leaving him with their baby, officers said.

Gagnon told Newburyport and Haverhill police, but they were unable to find any trace of the missing two. Then, two days ago, Gagnon collapsed in the home and was taken to the house of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gagnon of Merrimac street.

It WAS Cold This Morning

Only 10 Above Here; Warmer Tonight

Boston early risers shivered today in the coldest weather of the current winter, with the mercury hitting a season's low of 10 above zero at 6 a. m.

If it now is any comfort to these shiverers, however, the red line in the thermometer dropped to 18 below the cipher at Northfield, Vt., 16 below at Greenville, Me., 10 below at Pelham, N. H., and 2 below at Concord.

Relief from the cold is coming tonight, however, according to the Weather Man, and with the rising temperature will come snow flurries, followed by rain.

THE WEATHER

Increasing cloudiness and rising temperature late today, continuing into tonight; probably snow flurries tonight, turning to light rain, and somewhat warmer Thursday; lowest temperature tonight in the upper 20's; moderate northerly to northeasterly winds.

Find Parts Of Missing Clipper

BULLETINS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—The navy's base ship, Avocet, today radioed to the Navy Department that it had found wreckage of the missing Samoan Clipper and that parts of the wrecked plane were being recovered.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12 (AP)—The navy today notified Pan-American Airways, which is seeking its missing Samoan Clipper, that an oil slick was discovered 13 miles west of Pago Pago and that a navy launch was recovering parts of wreckage. "Identification satisfactory," said the unsigned message to the nafy.

HONOLULU, Jan. 12 (AP)—The Navy received a wireless message today that the aircraft tender Avocet was picking up wreckage of the Samoan clipper near Pago Pago. There was no mention of survivors.

PAGO PAGO, TUTUILA, American Samoa, Jan. 12 (AP) A Navy plane, after two flights in futile efforts to locate the missing Samoan Clipper and its crew of seven, charted a further search today with the aid of a surface vessel.

Reports that the clipper was sighted afloat 74 miles due west of Apia, British Samoa, were received from Dunedin, New Zealand, but the consensus here was that disaster, possibly from a midair explosion, might have overtaken the craft.

Observers here pointed out that the Dunedin reports may have followed a misconstruction of first unconfirmed reports the clipper was down at Apia.

Pan-American headquarters in San Francisco, discounting the belief the plane had burned, said a Navy plane would take off again at dawn in attempts to find the Clipper.

(Samoan time is four hours behind Pacific Standard Time. The international dateline is beyond Pago Pago.)

Wife-Swap To District Attorney

Interrupting torrid testimony of love-making in the Salem "wife-swapping" divorce hearing, Judge Edward B. O'Brien today in Salem probate court declared that at completion of the hearing he would give the case to the district attorney.

The judge also called a recess until a court stenographer could be secured and the remainder of the testimony in the case put into a permanent record for the district attorney's office.

Hundreds of spectators and would-be spectators rushed Salem probate court for the second day's hearing in the amazing case, the throng rivaling in size those that used to storm in at the Costello murder trial at Salem a few years back.

Two divorce suits are being heard, one brought by Mrs. Edith E. Lee, 27, of Beverly, against Raymond S. Lee, and the other by Calvin M. Watson of Topsfield against Mrs. Estelle Watson, 28, mother of a three-year-old son.

In her suit, Mrs. Lee charges that Mrs. Watson was intimate with Lee, while in his, Watson charges that Lee was intimate with Mrs. Watson.

Parked Car Driver Hit by Truck, Dying

WORCESTER, Jan. 12—Dragged 60 feet in the wreckage when his parked car was struck by a truck on the Worcester cut-off today, Vincent P. Gevrites, 24, of Barnes street, Auburn, is dying at St. Vincent's Hospital.

His wife, Helen, 21, was seriously hurt, but is expected to recover. She was thrown out of the auto. Gevrites had stopped his car to repair the engine and the truck which police said was driven by John Robbin of Eastern avenue crashed into it from the rear.

$1000 Bank Holdup

TORONTO, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press)—Two men held up the Weston branch of the Bank of Toronto at noon today and escaped with $1000. The teller fired several shots after the car in which the robbers escaped.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—Fifty of the fifty-six industrialists composing the Commerce Department's business advisory council have accepted invitations to discuss recovery measures with President Roosevelt January 19, Secretary of Commerce Roper announced today.

The remaining six members of the council are either ill or out of the country, the secretary explained.

At the conference, council members will discuss recommendations drafted by numerous subcommittees of the group dealing with a wide range of economic problems.

The meeting will comprise the President's most ambitious conference. It comes as the climax of a series of meetings with utility and other business leaders individually and in small groups.

Those who will attend include:

F. H. Adams, chairman of board, Air Reduction Co., New York; William L. Batt, president, S. K. F. Industries, Inc., Philadelphia; John D. Biggers, president, Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., Toledo, O.; Henry S. Dennison, president, Dennison Mfg. Co., Framingham, Mass.; Dr. W. Y. Elliott, department of government, Harvard University; John H. Fahey, chairman, Federal Home Loan Bank Board; Lincoln Filene, chairman of board, William Filene's Sons Co., Boston; W. A. Harriman (chairman of the council), chairman of the board, Union Pacific Railroad Co.; William A. Julian, treasurer of the United States; H. P. Kendall, president, the Kendall Co., Boston; Kermit Roosevelt, president, Roosevelt Steamship Co., Inc.; W. H. Wheeler, Jr., vice-president, Pitney-Bowes Postage Meter Corp., Stamford, Ct.

Girl Baby Born In Ambulance

Stork Wins Two-Mile Race on Icy Road

LAWRENCE, Jan. 12—Sir Stork won a two-mile race over icy pavements here today when a baby girl was born to Mrs. Jeanette Redmond, 26, in a fire department ambulance en route to the Bessie M. Burke Memorial Hospital.

Ambulance Attendant Thomas Sefman assisted at the birth as the swaying vehicle sped toward the hospital from the Redmond home on Haverhill street. Mother and daughter were said to be doing well after their arrival at the hospital.

The father, Carol Redmond, meanwhile couldn't do the usual anxious pacing while awaiting the blessed event. He was in the front seat of the ambulance with Driver James J. McGinn when his daughter was born.

Deal Set To Back Auditor

State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley today indicated his willingness to become the New Deal's candidate against Governor Hurley in the "war" between Hurley and President Roosevelt.

"No intelligent Democrat would disregard, without serious consideration, an offer of support of the President of the United States in the Democratic primary," Buckley said.

"In fact, if my memory is correct, the present governor knows the value of such support, since at the spring convention it was understood a number of delegates had been elected through the efforts of the administrative and other personnel of a single federal agency."

Despite this thinly veiled attack upon Governor Hurley's "Federal payrollers" and their votes, however, Buckley insisted he has "not received any proffer of support from the Roosevelt administration."

CANDIDATE FOR AUDITOR

"It is very pleasing, naturally, to feel that the administration of my office has been of such a type that the national leadership is interested in my name," he admitted.

But he added—

"At the moment, I am a candidate for auditor of the Commonwealth."

Everything today pointed to the President's backing someone—if not Buckley, then some other "as-

Urges More Money To End Recession

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—A two-fold remedy for the recession was offered here today by Dr. Irving Fisher, professor emeritus of economics at Yale University.

"To cure the recession," he said, "what was needed and is still needed, is, first: greater confidence to set the wheels of money turning again and, second: more money.

"Perhaps one of the two may be enough. Perhaps the new confidence which started with the President's address to Congress may do the trick. It might do it if the confidence were strong enough."

Speaking before the New York University Economics Society, Professor Fisher went on to say, however, that even if the present situation were fully remedied "we would still lack any permanent solution of the money problem."

"At present our money supply is a football kicked around by many players including the Federal Reserve Board, the Treasury and the banks," he said.

"We need to concentrate both the power and the responsibility to control our money supply as proposed by the late president of the National City Bank, Frank A. Vanderlip who like the late Governor Benjamin Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York understood the money problem."

Group in Senate O. K.'s Kennedy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—Senate confirmation of President Roosevelt's nomination of Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston to be ambassador to Great Britain was recommended by the Senate foreign relations committee today.

Approval also was given for the nominations of Norman Armour of New York, now minister to Canada, to be minister to Chile, and of Assistant Secretary of State Hugh R. Wilson of Illinois to be ambassador to Germany.

Urges Rail Boost To Provide Jobs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (AP)—The head of the Association of American Railroads estimated today that this country's railroads could put 150,000 men to work if railroad revenues climb back to normal.

The railroad executive, J. J. Pelley, president of the association, added a freight rate increase would bring an immediate increase in employment.

If the interstate commerce commission grants requested rate increases the railroads can resume buying at once, the stocky, florid-faced executive testified before the Senate unemployment committee.

"It would put us in a position to open our purchasing agency doors again," Pelley said. "No railroad is buying anything now."

He predicted an increase in railroad employment would bring a comparable grain in other industries.

Pelley told the committee he looked for no improvement in railroad employment in January, that it "may be a little worse."

DOWN TO 900,000

The witness said the total number of railroad employes has declined from 1,660,000 in 1929 to about 900,000 in January 1 of this year.

Prospects of inducing new capital to invest in the railroads field are "not bright," Pelley testified. He said, however, that some roads still were able to obtain needed financing.

"It's earnings that we need, however," Pelley said. "The roads don't want more capital unless they can increase their earnings."

Pelley said that an "emergency" increase in freight rates, approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1934, brought the railroads an additional revenue of $100,000,000 a year. These emergency charges were taken off in 1936.

He estimated that if the I. C. C. granted the railroad's request for freight and passenger rate increases now, the roads' revenues would rise $517,000,000 a year, if the 1937 traffic volume were maintained.

PURCHASING POWER NEEDED

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, told the committee the restoration of mass purchasing power, rather than revival of business "confidence," was needed to halt increasing unemployment.

The heavy set, white haired union official, took issue with industrial leaders who previously had testified that lack of confidence on the part of business men contributed to the trade slump.

"Does anyone seriously believe that the reason why the General Motors Corporation recently laid off 30,000 workers and inaugurated a three-day week for its remaining employes, was because Mr. Knudsen (William Knudsen, General Motors president) and his associates just did not have the 'confidence' to make more automobiles?" Whitney asked.

"Can anyone doubt that the real reason for this lay-off of such a large number of men was because the buying public did not have the purchasing power with which to purchase the automobiles made by General Motors.

EFFECT ON PRICES

"A study of the factor of railway wages in relation to retail prices reveals that a 10 per cent increase in railway wages, if entirely passed on to the price of the retail product, would add but eight-tenths of one per cent to food prices, sixteen one-thousandths of one per cent to clothing prices, approximately 1.1 per cent to fuel prices, and the effect on retail prices in general would be only about one-half of one per cent.

"In considering the effect of wages upon retail prices, the important fact should not be lost sight of that in the railroad industry, as well as in many other industries, wage costs are less than one-half of the total operating cost, and consequently a 10 per cent wage increase, all other factors being equal, would increase operating costs less than half that sum."

Business Spurt Seen in Piled Up Orders

Buying in Some Lines Heaviest in Past Several Months

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (AP)—Business managers looked over a mounting pile of New Year orders for raw materials and goods today on the chance they may necessitate a step-up of mill and mine operations and the recall of many workers laid off in the final months of 1937.

Suppressed for months while inventories were being reduced, the urge to buy again has been felt the last few days in copper, lead, coarse cotton cloths, hides, rubber and other basic markets sensitive to changes in underlying business conditions and sentiment.

Buying orders in some lines since the turn of the year have been the heaviest in months and have been timely aids to producers who saw reserve orders depleted in the virtual cessation of forward buying in the last six months of 1937.

Further broadening of the revival in raw materials, business observers said, probably would signal expansion in production since factories and mines were forced to curtail sharply for lack of new orders after inventory accumulation ceased last spring and summer.

CAUTION NOTICED

Most observers were cautious in accepting the new year stirrings as the start of a lasting resumption of demand and the precursor of a general advance in mill activity and payrolls. It was pointed out, however, that these in the past usually have been the first to feel a change in the economic currents.

Attracting particular attention has been a burst of cotton cloth trading in Worth street, the textile selling center, traditionally as keen as Wall street in sensing a shift in business trends. Among the first to seek a storm cellar last year when speculative buying for inventories stopped and commodity prices hit the skids, the "gray goods" market was estimated to have sold about 30,000,000 yards of cloth the past two days.

In trade circles it was explained the type of business being done indicated improvement in lines supplying goods to the man on the street and the housewife, and also reflected depletion of inventories while consumption ran ahead of production during the autumn and holiday retail buying.

ORDERS NEEDED

Mills, it was said, would have to accumulate more orders and get better prices to warrant important expansion in production schedules. As in copper, lead and other markets, the buying in textiles has been accompanied by a little recovery in prices after the steep decline last year.

Speculative demand in anticipation of increased absorption of raw materials for armament building, including the United States' plans for increased naval and merchant shipbuilding, was held partly accountable for the new year spurt in metals.

2nd Union Poll Ordered

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—The National Labor Board ordered a second election to determine what union shall represent the 475 employes of the [illegible] Manufacturing Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Politicians Want 45 Millions More

TO STUDY Massachusetts tax problems, the Legislature a year ago appointed a commission headed by Senator Joseph R. Cotton of Lexington.

But the commission, as politicians habitually do, interpreted its appointment as a mandate to find more money for the people to pay and the politicians to spend.

State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, a member of the commission, reveals the plans. Forty-five million dollars is to be raised. And the working people of Massachusetts will raise it. Not even those unfortunate men and women who are on the WPA and on city and town charity rolls will escape paying.

Never before in the long history of this State has there been suggested such a brazen, cold-blooded SCHEME FOR GOUGING THE POOR.

The members of the commission call it a CONSUMERS' TAX. Privately, they admit that it is a SALES TAX.

It begins by making every store, every business and every industry a tax collector.

It continues by forcing even the six-year-old child who buys a stick of candy to become a taxpayer.

It ignores the fact that it is certain to drive Massachusetts business to Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

It takes no notice of the truth that the Commonwealth's poorest citizen will be assessed on the same scale as the multi-millionaire.

It recognizes only the hunger of the politicians for FORTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS MORE SPENDING MONEY.

And it has neither tears nor pity for those from whom it would extract the forty-five millions.

Our opinion is that the commission, dining today in the luxury of a Boston hotel, has much to learn. And by no means the least important of the forthcoming knowledge is the grim fact that the people always know how to deal with politicians who never think of reducing expenses, but devote all their efforts to finding something new to tax.

New Wage-Hour Bill Planned

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (AP)—The House labor committee decided today to draft a new wage-hour bill to carry out President Roosevelt's demand for legislation at this session.

Chairman Norton (D) of New Jersey announced the decision after more than an hour's discussion of the problems presented by the action of the House in shelving, at the recent special session, the labor standards bill originally recommended by the committee.

Mrs. Norton said no details of the proposed new measure were discussed, but asserted the committee seemed still in favor of flexible legislation rather than the more rigid type proposed by the American Federation of Labor. The latter would have imposed uniform minimum wages of 40 cents an hour and a maximum work week of 40 hours.

Harvard Union Hears Sweezey

Dr. Alan R. Sweezey, Harvard University economics instructor whose contract was not renewed last year because of alleged radical opinions, tonight will address a unionization meeting of university maintenance employes in Cyprus Hall.

More than 100 janitors, maids and watchmen were said by Organizer Robert Everitt of Local [illegible], Building Service Employes Union, to have indicated their decision to join the American Federation of Labor group.

Everitt asserted he would seek wage increases for the maids, who, he said, average only $9 a week. He declared the women are paid a fair hourly wage, but work a total of only 26 hours a week. Seniority rights and better working conditions will also be asked for the other employes.

Senate Balks on Veto Power

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—A new economy plan, under which President Roosevelt would be given virtually blanket power to slash appropriations subject to Congressional veto, was sent to the Senate by the House today.

The authority was conferred under a rider added to the $1,500,000,000 independent offices supply bill passed by the House yesterday. In effect, the rider proposed by Representative Woodrum (D) of Virginia, would give the President "item veto" power. Similar authority is asked in constitutional amendment resolutions pending in both the Senate and House.

The House, caught by surprise and with but a handful of members present, adopted the rider by a voice vote and with only a few protests. The provision, however, may become a major issue in the Senate on the ground it is a new surrender of congressional power to the chief executive.

President Roosevelt asked for such authority in his budget message, in which he estimated a deficit of $950,000,000 next year. Under terms of the rider he could either eliminate or reduce governmental activities to reduce the deficit still further.

Justice Black Late for Fete

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (AP)—Justice Hugo L. Black—making his first White House appearance since he went to the Supreme Court—was several minutes late last night at the President's annual reception for the judiciary.

All the other Supreme Court justices who attended had passed the receiving line when Justice and Mrs. Black arrived.

"Was I late?" the justice asked later.

Children, Aided By Magnate, His Big Interest

(Editor's Note: This is the first of three articles, analyzing and describing the Henry Ford of today. The writer is the first reporter in more than 0 years to spend an entire working day with Ford at his laboratories at Dearborn, Mich., from 8:30 o'clock in the morning until 6:30 at night.)

By PAUL GALLICO

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

DEARBORN, Mich., Jan. 12 (INS)—The tall, thin, angular-faced man, against whom the National Labor Relations Board is taking punitive action in the federal courts, who is despised by the CIO and a target for the New Deal, begins his day among little children.

Henry Ford, today, at the age of 74, lives in a queer, detached world, not only of his own imagining, but of his own construction.

It is a world that at first glimpse might seem to be one of madness, but when studied closely is revealed to have an odd sort of beauty and a wistfulness that touches the heart.

This is his Greenfield Village here, where the strange man who manufactures the cars and tractors of tomorrow dwells in, or close to, the long-gone country of his boyhood, the America of yesterday.

FANTASTIC QUALITY

Greenfield Village, visited alone or with a guide, has a fantastic nightmare quality—here a Jersey boarding house where Edison lived, there Gog and Magog right from London's Strand, striking the hour in front of a clock shop, here again a New England church, there a cottage from the Cotswolds, England, complete with long-haired sheep and all, old forges, rustic machine shops, rural grocery store, tintype parlor, clapboard homes of famous men, tiny brick slave huts.

But Greenfield Village visited in company of Henry Ford is something entirely different. It assumes suddenly a tender and nostalgic quality that is hard to describe.

It is above all things sane, with a sort of majestic sanity, because here a man has gathered together all of the things he ever loved and revered, and put them where he could get at them—a physical projection of the sanctuary of the mind.

KEEPS WORLD IN PLACE

It is difficult to estimate how much the outside world managed to impinge upon Ford. During the course of the day he talked about the country, Washington, the bankers and the financiers, labor, wages, farming and industry, religion. But they seemed to be abstractions.

If the NLRB, or the New Deal, or the CIO had got under his skin, it was not evident. These were unrealities, and apparently temporary nuisances which would abate with time. A man his age knows something about the power of time.

The only realities were the children in his schools, or the walls of Stephen Foster's home reverberating to "My Old Kentucky Home," or his new spidery tractor, or his experiments in engines and vegetable products.

STARTS DAY IN CHURCH

He wore a brown, patterned suit, a white shirt with a white, stiff, turndown collar and a dark red solid color tie. A thin, white-gold watch chain passed across his vest; he wore no other jewelry of any kind.

The day began at 8:30 in the morning when he drove from the engineering laboratory, in his small undistinguished black Tudor Ford sedan to the little replica of a New England church, copied from one in Bradford, Mass.

We went, in effect, through the looking glass. On the other side there was new snow on the ground and the jingling of sleigh bells in the air. The little church was pine-and-needle bright, spic and span, and full of shining, scrubbed children, in gingham and cotton and dimity and woolens in gay, fine colors.

The church was all white paint and dark wood, and a glittering crystal chandelier hung from the center. The organ played softly as the children filed in quietly. There were more girls than boys.

Ford led the way up a narrow doll's house stairway to his tiny pew in the loft. The children's choir filed in and stood at the altar, the girls in step-ladder line, big ones on the two ends, descending to the little one with red hair in the center. The organ hummed "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" and the children sang.

"Some of their fathers ought to be in jail six months of the year, and prison the other six," he said.

A tall girl in a red sweater led the hymns and the reading of two simple psalms. Two frightened girls recited short poems. The chapel part was over and they sang a Victor Herbert waltz tune. Then Ford left.

"Good morning, Mr. Ford . . . Hello, Mr. Ford . . . good morning, Mr. Ford . . ."

We went out [illegible] about the village and went into the home of Stephen Foster, composer of American folk songs.

WORLD NEEDS YOUNGSTERS

The old rooms of the house were peopled with pleasant ghosts. In the kitchen burned a perpetual fire. Some of the rooms were fitted out with tiny chairs. The little girls of the school came there to learn to sew. Ford's eyes were bright with pleasure. He said:

"Trouble with the world today is, people don't go to children enough. I don't like old people. I stay away from them."

He looked [illegible] and wistful.

The organist from the church came over (Ford had sent for him) and sat at the electric organ, the one anachronism in the Stephens parlor. He played. The music permeated the house. In the ceiling of each room there was a concealed outlet—"Swanee River," "My Old Kentucky Home," old nostalgic Southern melodies. Where were the NLRB, the NRA, the CIO?

SWISS MUSIC BOX

He produced a key and unlocked a big chest. It was a Swiss music box in the old style. He wound it and touched a lever and the sweet, thin tinkling "Swanee River." It was in perfect pitch. The organist played a deep, soft [illegible].

"The only reason it works is because I keep it locked," said Ford.

An old-fashioned two-horse sleigh, driven by a man wrapped to his ears in bearskin, jingled by in the snow outside the window. The portrait of Stephen Foster gazed down from over the mantle. This was the other side of the looking-glass, where this strange man dwells much of the time.

(In tomorrow's story, Henry Ford and his guests leave the village and visit Ford's laboratory, where he shows off his new toy, his cheap light tractor, to the visiting distributors, and discusses with them his plans for bringing the country back to its own.)

74 Years Old, Ever Young

Absorbed in progress of children in Greenfield Village is Henry Ford. In the little school he once attended he smiles as joys of the past live again for him. He moved the school to the village. It has been used ever since, a haven for youngsters befriended by Ford.

Magazine Cleared In Obscene Slur At President

Federal agents were in Salem today seeking certain artists there and in other nearby art colonies for questioning in connection with obscene reference to President Roosevelt, found in tiny letters in an illustration appearing in a national radio magazine.

The illustration in question depicts an imaginary first page of a newspaper. It is headed "Good News." Beneath are what purport to be the usual columns of type; however, there is no real news print, the artist, instead, having worked apparently meaningless "hen scratches."

Concealed in minute letters in this apparently meaningless jumble, however, are the remarks concerning the President.

The illustration already has been traced back by federal men from the magazine to the advertising agency that placed the advertisement and from the agency back to a commercial art firm that did the actual illustrating.

The magazine itself—"QST" published by the American Radio League, Inc., at New Haven—has been exonerated of any blame for the advertisement's appearance, as has also the advertising agency and the art firm. The concealed slur, it is stated, unquestionably was some individual's "crackpot" idea.

Baby Settlement Given Mrs. Ryan

Ned Parks Agrees To Care for Son Of Pat's Wife

MORGANTON, N. C., Jan. 12 (AP)—A charge of non-support of an illegitimate child, brought by Mrs. Basil "Pat" Ryan, against Ned A. Parks, Washington soda dispenser, was dismissed in Burke county court today after Parks' attorney informed the court that "a satisfactory financial settlement" had been made.

Parks, 24, former Morganton youth, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Ryan about a month before her marriage to the copper fortune heir.

His attorney, J. Ed Butler, submitted a judgment which was accepted by the court and by attorneys for Mrs. Ryan, the former Martha Barkley of Morganton who married Ryan November 4.

TERMS SECRET

Complete terms of the settlement were not disclosed. The judgment set forth that "a satisfactory settlement for the support, maintenance and education of the said illegitimate child has been made by the said Ned Parks" and had been accepted by counsel for the mother of the baby boy, who was born last September 14.

Mrs. Ryan was not in the courtroom.

Ryan also was absent.

BRIDAL BIG SURPRISE

Shortly after his marriage Ryan issued a statement through an attorney saying he had no recollection of going through a ceremony with Miss Barkley, and was astonished when he awoke in a Hickory hotel the next day to find her and her baby in the same [illegible] with him.

Pope Sees Little Hope of Accord With Nazis

Mussolini Expected To Help Heal Big Berlin Break

By FRANK GERVASI

International News Service Staff Correspondent

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 12—In his longest speech in years, Pope Pius today saw little hope for a Catholic-Nazi reconciliation, yet in diplomatic quarters it was believed that Premier Mussolini planned intervention to bring about friendly relations between Germany and the Holy See.

The Pope launched into his latest criticism of the Reich in a sudden appeal to several thousand Italian propaganda workers who are shortly leaving on a mission to Germany.

"Act as firm disciples of the Christian faith!" he urged.

DUCE ACTION HINTED

In spite of the tenor of the Pope's remarks, the belief that Il Duce planned some action on behalf of the Church grew out of his speech Sunday, when, talking to a group of bishops and priests, he made repeated warm references of friendship for the Holy See.

"From my post at the helm of the bark of St. Peter's," said the 80-year-old Pope, "I cannot fail to see visions descending beyond the Alps which seem menacing, or at least nebulous, and behind which there does not seem to be a ray of sunshine."

Sorrowfully referring to alleged Nazi persecution of the Catholic Church, the Pope asserted that priests should accompany the Italian workers into Germany to provide spiritual assistance against any anti-Catholic movement by the Nazis.

Col. Knox Offers Plan to Restore G. O. P. Power

Calls for Reduction Of Tariffs Which 'Built Monopolies'

CLEVELAND, Jan. 12 (INS)—Declaring that the Republican party first of all must stand for the reduction of "excessive tariffs," Colonel Frank Knox, candidate for Vice-President in 1936, today had outlined a program by which he declared the party can be restored to power.

He assailed tariffs which he said had built up monopolies in the domestic markets, but defended the orthodoxy of his Republicanism by asserting he nevertheless was a staunch champion of the protective principle.

In an address which he admitted he had made "deliberately provocative," he said:

"The Republican party must become again the party of the plain folks of America—the sort of people who gave it life 75 years ago and the same sort of people who have kept it in power most of that time.

ASSAILS SUBSIDIES

"We must speak in unmistakable terms to those industries which, through excessive tariff schedules have enjoyed a monopoly of domestic market and thus inordinately increased the cost of living.

"We must say to them: If you do not believe in a system of direct subsidies from the government for the farmer, you must abandon your insistence for an indirect subsidy through excessively high tariff rates for yourselves.

CHAMPION "PRINCIPLE"

"We do not mean by this the abandonment of the protective principle, but we do mean that that principle shal cease to be made a cloak for monopolistic practices at the expense of the consuming public.

"We would retain a full measure of protection for the American standard of wages, we would protect the worker against competition with cheap labor abroad."

Col. Knox spoke at a dinner in honor of Harold H. Burton, mayor of Cleveland, and his address was broadcast.

U. S. Acts to Aid New Jobless

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—A steadily rising tide of unemployment, hunger and poverty, contained in reports flowing into the Capital from every corner of the nation, today claimed grave attention of administration leaders and brought prompt pledges of relief.

Concerned over the constantly darkening picture, President Roosevelt called upon Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator, for an immediate report on relief needs.

Submitted at once, this showed 1,760,000 on federal relief lists—an increase of 300,000 since December 1. The greatest peak will come, Williams told Mr. Roosevelt, about February 1.

Walsh 5 Hours Late For Talk to Women

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 12 (AP)—Senator David I. Walsh (D.) of Massachusetts had a good speech prepared for the Catholic Women of Thomas a Kempis but they didn't hear it.

Four hundred of them met at 2 p. m. yesterday to listen to him, waited in vain for hours, and went home.

At 7:30 a Washington train pulled in with the senator, suffering a bad head cold and surprised to learn the speech was supposed to be at 2, not 8 p. m.

British Revolution Data Lost in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—Police were asked today by Eugene Rosedale to keep a weather eye out for an eight-page document warning an English king of an impending revolution.

The document was written in 1765, addressed to George III, and the revolution was that in the American colonies as no international crisis was anticipated. Rosedale said he lost the document, and declared it was priceless.

Pointing out that all brewery drivers in the Northwest belong to the teamster's union, Beck predicted similar action throughout the United States.

Gen. Johnson Says:

2 NEW DEAL FLOPS

Labor, Commerce Bureaus

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12—Yesterday's column pinned what I think is a deserved rose on the Department of Justice.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

Although I know that many readers will disagree, I believe that Mr. Ickes has been as good a Secretary of the Interior as we have ever had. There are excellent people in the Treasury, but poor, old "Henry the Morgue" isn't responsible for what goes on there. The President, himself, must take whatever praise or blame may be coming. He is his own Secretary of the Treasury.

It doesn't make much difference who is Secretary of War or Navy. The General Staff in one case and the General Board in the other are permanent institutions which run those departments no matter who sits in the Secretary's seat. These services are so technical that a civilian simply cannot function.

But there is no more astute statesman than Secretary Swanson and the Assistant Secretary, Mr. Edison, is a good son of a great father.

After some early bumps, Harry Woodring has turned out to be a good Secretary of War. I was pleasantly surprised to learn recently that, on the occasion of an unjustified attack on the Chief of Staff, the new Assistant Secretary of War, Louis Johnson, rose nobly to the support of a great soldier.

The Department of Agriculture has long been one of the greatest scientific and technical organizations in the world. But, while nobody who knows him can fail to have admiration, and even affection, for the Secretary, I am so strongly opposed to some of the political and economic heresies on which he has allowed himself to be sold, that I regard him as one of the most dangerous individuals in the United States.

No one who has followed this column can be in much doubt of the very high regard in which it holds the State Department—and that goes from the Secretary down. I doubt if this country ever had anything to compare with Mr. Hull and such juniors as Sumner Welles and Francis Sayre.

But what words are adequate to deal with the Department of Commerce and the Department of Labor?

It was the business of Secretary Roper to keep calm and sweet the relations between government and business—and just look at the mess they are in!

It was the business of the Department of Labor to promote peace and progress on the labor front—and take one slant at the greatest labor upset and confusion in our history.

Mr. Roper is the product of the trade in the Chicago Convention when Mr. McAdoo paid off his grudge against Al Smith. He has never had the confidence of business. He knows so little about it that he can't predict trends of opinion and action. He doesn't know how to select the bell-wethers as advisers who could have kept the peace.

There is no excuse whatever for the present sniping and hostility between business and government. Nobody was ever more adept in political leadership of business than Franklin Roosevelt. That he was ever allowed to get into his present bitter frame of mind is a killing of the goose that lays the golden eggs, and a crime against the American people. If that isn't the responsibility of the Secretary of Commerce, whose is it?

The same kind of responsibility hangs like the dead albatross around the neck of the Secretary of Labor. I know intimately both William Green and John Lewis. This government, in my experience, never asked either of them for a concession for the common good that he did not make. I know of no two men who are easier to get along with, or more public-spirited.

If the present impossible labor condition isn't the responsibility of the Department of Labor, whose is it?

On the face of the record, these two departments are complete flops.

U. S. Board to Act On Cotton Labels

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—The Federal Trade Commission today announced proposed trade rules concerning shrinkage properties of woven cotton yarn goods and ordered further hearings to discuss final approval of these rules.

Primary purpose of the proposed rules is to prevent label misrepresentation as to the preshrunk character of cotton goods.

N. E. Governors Act on Bid to Flood Parley

President Ready to Discuss Projects Next Week

New England governors called a conference for today to decide on what day next week they will meet President Roosevelt to discuss flood control legislation.

The White House has informed Congressman John W. McCormack that 11 a. m. Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday would be convenient for the President.

In view of the recent conference of nine Southeastern governors with the President, at which the wage-hour bill and freight rate differentials were reported under discussion, it is believed the agenda of the meeting with New England chief executives will include more than flood control conversation.

The federal power commission this week criticized the attitude of New England governors toward flood control legislation.

The commission insisted the federal government should retain control over the power which will be generated as a result of flood control projects on the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers.

Vt. Doctor Bailed On Woman's Charge

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Jan. 12—Dr. W. D. Bowen, 53, today was free in $1000 bail after pleading not guilty to a charge of attempted attack on a North Westminster divorcee.

7 From Hub On Hebrew Honor List

164 Jews, 11 Non-Jews Cited For Great 1937 Achievements

Seven prominent Jewish residents of Greater Boston were named today by the American Hebrew, oldest Anglo-Jewish magazine in America, to the annual honor roll for achievement during the past year.

The magazine listed 164 Jews and 11 non-Jews for accomplishments in their professions and outstanding contributions to government welfare work, the arts, education, science and Palestine welfare.

Louis E. Kirstein, Boston philanthropist, was signally honored. His name was included among 45 given special mention for their work. In this list were five non-Jews: President Roosevelt, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, former National Commander Harry W. Colmery of the American Legion and Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago.

The remaining Boston area Jewish residents honored were Judge Jennie Loitman Baron, Professor Louis F. Fieser of Harvard University, Frank Koppelman and Israel Cherry, Boston lawyers, and Isaac Goldberg, Boston author.

Also listed as one of the nation's outstanding Jews was the late Edward A. Filene, noted philanthropist.

Numbers Bookie Fined $75 in Roxbury

$150 Worth of Pool Slips Found in Tailor Shop

A Roxbury tailor who filed number pool slips in his pants-pressing room and who had $150 worth of slips on the number 7632 that he didn't pay off, according to police, was fined $75 in Roxbury Court today by Judge Frankland W. L. Miles.

Sergeant John Holmes of the Roxbury police told the court he entered the tailor shop of Israel Chansky, 60, on Blue Hill avenue, Saturday, and that he found more than 100 number pool slips in the back room, four of which, worth $1500, were on the number 763 and were not paid off.

Chansky was found guilty on a charge of being concerned in a lottery, was fined and given a suspended sentence of 10 days in jail. John F. Boyle and Max Lakey of Roxbury were found not guilty on similar charges growing out of the same case.

'Iron Lung' Victim Changes Hospitals

CHICAGO, Jan. 12 (INS)—Sydney Throckmorton, infantile paralysis victim who has lived in an iron lung four months, was successfully removed from an Evanston hospital to Edward Hines Memorial Hospital.

Saugus Folk Enraged by Catnaping

Insidious agents for medical students today were blamed for an epidemic of catnaping in which more than 30 Saugus felines have disappeared from their homes in recent weeks.

The theory was advanced by Fred T. Vickers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who said that the professional cat stealers got a flat rate of 50 cents an animal from the embryonic physicians.

Vickers revealed that a mysterious woman was seen several days ago attempting to entice cats into her car on Herbert avenue, Saugus. His office and police headquarters, he said, have been flooded by phone calls from irate residents whose pets have disappeared.

And the cat owners may well be alarmed if his theory is true, Vickers declared, for the fate of the tabbies is a sad one—even if all nine lives are sacrificed in such a sacred cause as that of science.

At the same time, the S. P. C. A. representative said he was investigating the possibility that the medical students were responsible for the poisoning of 15 dogs in the same community.

Two dogs have died in the past week and a number are being treated. Police, however, believe the dogs ate poison spread on a Saugus dump to rid the area of rats.

Recover Plane Dead, Inquest Set Today

Cause of Crash Fatal To 10 Sought in Probe by U. S.

BOZEMAN, Mont., Jan. 12 (INS)—Bodies of the 10 victims who lost their lives when a Northwest Airlines sky zephyr crashed and burned in the Bridger Mountains near here were brought on bobsleds and motor trucks to Bozeman, where an inquest is scheduled for today.

Crews made their hazardous way to the scene of the disaster 17 miles northeast of Bozeman and brought back the victims. Two officials of the postoffice department took charge of the cargo of mail.

Snowplows began carving out a path along the roads to enable the motor trucks to get through with the cargo of dead. Rescuers worked in the face of a numbing snowstorm.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—A federal board of inquiry was named today by Secretary of Commerce Roper to investigate the crash of the Northwest Airlines luxury liner at Bozeman, Mont.

The board's findings will be studied carefully by congressional authorities to determine whether the Northwest Airlines route through Montana carried the latest safety precautions, recently recommended by the Senate commerce committee.

Senator Copeland (D) of N. Y., commerce committee chairman, said he would withhold judgment on the crash.

'Wife-Swap' Story Told In Salem Court Will Be Sent to District Attorney

yesterday, when the amazing story of wife-swapping in the two families was testified to by Lee, the Beverly husband testified today that all four of the principals, following one party at the Watson home, had slept in the same bed.

Lee's testimony was frequently interrupted by Judge O'Brien, but the red-haired, gum-chewing witness appeared unperturbed through it all.

"Probably two or three dozen times," Mrs. Lee retired at night with Watson while Lee slept with Mrs. Watson, the witness asserted, and he insisted that all concerned seemed happy about the whole thing.

LEE RESUMES STAND

When Lee first resumed the stand today he was under cross-examination by Attorney William H. McSweeney, counsel for Watson and for Mrs. Lee.

"When was the last time you saw Mrs. Watson?" the witness was asked.

"Well, the best I remember, four months ago, maybe longer," Lee answered.

Q—That was some time in October? A—About that—yes.

Judge O'Brien interrupted here to say:

"I don't see anything to this case so far as this man is concerned. Now I ruled yesterday that you could go only so far. I'm not going to have this case take on a stage of nonsense. There is a narrow issue involved here and I want you to keep to the issue.

"I don't want to sit here and listen to a lot of disgusting evidence unless it is necessary.

"I am not criticizing you (McSweeney) or anybody else."

REPLIES TO JUDGE

McSweeney replied:

"I only wanted to show the court that there has been continued intimacy between this man and Mrs. Watson."

CALVIN M. WATSON

Judge O'Brien:

"I don't need continued intimacy so far as this case is concerned."

McSweeney dropped Lee and he was taken in re-direct examination by the counsel he retained yesterday, Thomas A. Henry, who also is counsel for Mrs. Watson.

Q—You've known Mr. Watson for a great many years, haven't you? A—Yes.

Q—At some time you and your wife became friendly with the Watsons? A—Yes.

Q—And you went to their house? A—Often—many times.

Q—In the spring of 1936 you used to go to parties at the Watson house? A—Yes, we had parties once a week—sometimes once every two weeks.

Q—And liquor was served? A—Yes.

JUDGE WARNS

It was at this point that Judge O'Brien interrupted the trial to say the case would be given to the district attorney and to wait for a court stenographer. After the stenographer had arrived, Lee's testimony was resumed.

Q—After you had a party, did the four of you sleep in the same bed? A—Yes.

Q—How soon after that were you again down at the Watson house? A—We were down there all the time—within a week after that.

Q—What happened the next time? A—We split up.

Judge O'Brien:

"Do you mean the four of you slept in the same bed?"

Lee:

"Yes the night after we had the party."

QUIZZED BY JUDGE

Judge O'Brien: "Well, when was that? I wasn't there and I'm glad I wasn't."

Attorney Henry: "Was it in the spring of 1936?"

Lee: "Well, I would say it was before the summertime—maybe some time in the spring."

Judge O'Brien: "Well, can't you give us a definite idea? What month was it?"

Lee: "I couldn't be definite."

Attorney Henry resumed questioning of Lee.

Q—When did you go to the Cape for your vacation? A—The last week in August and the first in September.

Q—Well how long did it happen before you went on your vacation? A—Possibly about six or seven months before my vacation.

Q—Then it was months before that that the four of you slept together? A—Yes, I had known them quite a while.

CONTINUED MONTHS

Judge O'Brien—"Do you mean that there were several beds in the house, yet the four of you slept in one bed?"

Lee—"Yes, there were two beds in two bedrooms, but the four of us slept in one bed."

Judge O'Brien—"And do you mean you all four were intimate in that bed?"

"Lee—"No, sir; I mean we slept in that bed."

Henry again resumed his questioning:

Q—After that night at the party, did you split up and how did you sleep? A—Yes, we split up. I was with his wife and he was with mine.

Q—For how long did that continue? A—Possibly for five or six months.

Q—Do you mean that each time Watson would sleep with your wife you would sleep with his wife? A—Yes.

Judge O'Brien: "Well, how many times did you sleep with Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Watson sleep with you?"

DIFFERENT BEDS

Lee: "Oh, probably two or three dozen times—maybe more than that."

Judge O'Brien: "Each couple was in a different bed?"

Lee: "Yes sir."

Attorney Henry: "Your wife and Mr. Watson would occupy separate beds in a separate room?"

Lee—"Yes."

Q—And you did the same with Mrs. Watson? A—Yes.

Q—And all four parties knew what was going on? A—Yes, and nobody showed any signs of being discontented.

Judge O'Brien—"Where did all this happen?"

Lee—"Part of the time at my house and part of the time at their house. Some weeks it happened three or four times. All the neighbors knew about it. They saw his car parked outside my house in the early morning hours."

JOKE IS SEEN

Lee testified that a various times he heard people "prowling around" his home and the Watson house, but when he brought it to the attention of his wife and Watson, "they just laughed it off and thought it was a great joke."

His wife was always present at the Watson house when he visited there, Lee further testified.

Q—(By Attorney Henry) Did your wife stay there all the time during your visit? A—Now that I think of it—although I didn't think of it at the time—my wife generally made arrangements to go out of the house when the three of us were there.

Judge O'Brien: "You mean by agreement she made arrangements to go out of the house?"

Lee: "No, sir."

Q—(By Henry) Now there was a raid April 6, 1937, at the Watson house. Were you being intimate with your wife during 1937? A—Up until two weeks before the raid.

USING TYPEWRITER

Q—And the night of the raid your wife came down to the Watson house with you? A—Yes, she did.

Q—What was she doing? A—She was typing.

Q—At some time Mrs. Watson went upstairs to the bedroom and you followed her? A—Yes.

Q—Where were you at the time of the raid? A—In bed with Mrs. Watson.

Q—Had you done that on other occasions? A—Certainly.

Q—Did your wife see you at this? Did she know you were in bed with Mrs. Watson? A—Many times. It didn't mean anything to her and it didn't bother her.

Q—How many times was your wife in bed with Mr. Watson? A—A number of times.

Q—The night of the raid were you intimate with Mrs. Watson? A—No.

Judge O'Brien: "Do you (Attorney Henry) expect me to believe that these two people were in bed, under the bedclothes, and nothing happened? Do you think, as a sensible man, I can take this testimony and believe it?"

Attorney Henry: "Yes, Your Honor; at least I was told that."

Lee asserted on the witness stand that after his wife brought her divorce action last fall he resumed marital relations with her and spent several nights with her, one at her sister's home in Lynn, another at her aunt's home in Peabody and a third at the Elm street, Beverly, address where he is living.

For the first time Attorney McSweeney introduced into evidence the love letter purported to have been written by Lee to Mrs. Watson, and it was marked as an exhibit.

BLUSHES AT LETTER

Lee brought smiles to the spectators' gallery when he testified the letter was one written in a contest among himself, his wife and the Watsons—the writer of the best letter to be "shouted" by the losers with a growler of beer.

When McSweeney read the letter, Lee blushed noticeably and appeared to be decidedly uneasy on the stand.

Attorney McSweeney then attempted to introduce a torrid poem alleged to have been written by Lee to Mrs. Watson and the lawyer suggested that Judge O'Brien read it privately.

Judge O'Brien demurred, however.

"You'll be astounded," said the attorney to the court.

"I don't need to get any thrills from a poem," declared Judge O'Brien.

"Well I don't need to get any thrills from a poem, either," retorted McSweeney.

POEM RULED OUT

Lee then testified to a meeting he said took place at Saugus in 1937 among himself, his wife, Watson and Mrs. Lee's stepfather named Smith. The others had driven to the Smith house in Saugus.

"I was in the back seat," said Lee. "My wife and Cal (Watson) were in the front seat. My stepfather came out to the car. He told her she would have to stop fooling around with so many fellows and that she would have to decide who she wanted—me or the other fellow.

rather live with Watson, wearing

"My wife cried and said she'd burlap, than with me. Cal told her she was the sweetest thing in the world. We then drove away."

Lee left the stand and Watson was recalled. Under questioning by his counsel he testified that the first time he saw the love letter introduced into evidence was in February of last year, when he found it in Mrs. Watson's hope chest.

DENIED CONTEST

Watson denied there had ever been any letter-writing contest.

"That must have been one of Lee's pipe dreams," said the witness.

Mrs. Lee, a decidedly pretty girl, was then called as a witness. She told the court she had known Watson before she married Lee 10 years ago and that her suspicions against her husband and Mrs. Watson were first aroused two weeks or a month before Lee and Mrs. Watson were allegedly trapped in the raid last April at the Watson home.

"I first got suspicious because my husband, when he was drinking, was bragging about his conquests," said Mrs. Lee.

"LIGHTS SOMETIMES OUT"

"Well, I had to go out and get groceries every night and prepare my husband's lunch. I asked my husband to do it but he's say he had worked all day and I would have to do my share.

"When I asked Mrs. Watson to go with me, she always made some excuse.

"I used to be gone for 20 minutes or half an hour. Sometimes when I returned the lights were out. Mrs. Watson said she liked to listen to the radio in the dark."

Mrs. Lee testified that on the night of the April raid Mrs. Watson had called up and asked the Lees over, as Mrs. Watson was alone.

"When we got to the Watson home I took my child and put him to sleep on the divan in the living room," Mrs. Lee said. "Mrs. Watson said, when we got there, 'I didn't dress. I'm going to take a bath.' She took a bath almost every night in the week.

"She said, 'I'll take a bath now. You won't mind, will you?' My husband had taken his book and gone upstairs to read because he sai tdhe light was better up there."

"HUSBAND ALL EXCITED"

"I started pecking at a typewriter under the stairs in the hall. Pretty soon I heard water drawn and I thought no more of it.

"While I was typewriting, I heard a commotion. I ran upstairs and there I saw Mr. and Mrs. Quinn (the private detectives) and Mr. Watson. My husband was all excited. His hair was standing on end. His shoes were off and his shirt was out. He had lipstick on his face.

"I picked up my child and was rushed out."

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

"Washington Merry-Go-Round," by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, sprightly and informative column on the inside activities of political Washington, is now a daily feature of the Boston Evening American. It will also appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser every Sunday.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—You can chalk it up as fairly certain that the man who fills Justice Sutherland's shoes will come from the West—even if it is only as far west as Chicago. This is because the two Supreme Court resignations during Roosevelt's administration were western, from Wyoming (Van Devanter) and from Utah (Sutherland).

Irony of fate is that had they not fought Roosevelt's Supreme Court bill, either Senator Wheeler of Montana or Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming could have walked away with Sutherland's job. They would have fitted into the picture perfectly.

Getting down to specific persons, the President would like to reward Stanley Reed, the solicitor-general, but it is more likely he will wait to appoint him to McReynolds' place when the Tennessean resigns. Reed comes from Kentucky. Incidentally, he has established a remarkable record of winning Supreme Court decisions, having scored his fifteenth consecutive victory for the Government last week.

DONALD RICHBERG—One man to keep an eye on particularly is Donald Richberg, one-time partner of General Johnson in flapping the Blue Eagle's wings, later his successor.

Don Richberg's ambition is to sit on the Supreme Court. Although he has alienated his old Railway Brotherhood friends, for whom he was once counsel, plus a good many other people, he has not alienated the President.

In fact, Richberg had a hand in writing Roosevelt's last message to Congress (the other ghost-writer having been Judge Sam Rosenman of New York).

ENEMY MONEY—Richberg comes from Chicago and fits into the Western scheme of appointments, but in New Deal circles there is one large black mark against his name. He has become a thriving legal lobbyist, having accepted fees from a conglomeration of anti-New Deal agencies. One of these was the automobile group which attempted to settle the anti-trust action taken against them in Milwaukee.

But Richberg's most amazing client is a gentleman named Trujillo, who is president of the Dominican Republic and the bloodiest dictator in the Western Hemisphere. Richberg inherited this client from Joseph E. Davies when Davies married the breakfast food heiress, Mrs. Post Hutton, and became Ambassador to Russia.

Note—Davies already had received a fee of $460,000 from Trujillo for safeguarding amortization payments on the Dominican debt.

HAITIAN MASSACRE—At present Richberg is representing the Dominican president in his dispute with Haiti, resulting from the massacre of about 8,000 Haitians in the most horrible manner. At a given signal, reputedly given by Trujillo himself, these Haitians were driven into the sea, chopped up with machetes, some drenched with gasoline and ignited while living.

For some time Trujillo refused to conciliate the dispute. After much pressure by the United States, he finally issued a spectacular announcement that he would do so, but when the official acceptance arrived it showed that he merely accepted conciliation of whether or not he previously had refused to conciliate.

Which meant that nothing minus nothing left nothing. Some people suspected Don Richberg's astute legal mind of trumping up this [illegible].

At any rate Trujillo appointed Richberg and the Dominican minister in Cuba as his representatives to conciliate the question of whether he had previously refused to conciliate. But the envoy in Cuba refuses to come to Washington because of a cold, although seen nightly in Havana's night clubs.

All this is getting on the nerves of the State Department and the entire Pan-American Union. Latest inner circle suggestion is to make Don Richberg settle the whole blithering mess as a test of his judicial qualities for the Supreme Court.

MERRY-GO-ROUND—Governor Nice of Maryland is reported to be grooming Charles Deltar as Republican nominee for Senator. If Senator Millard Tydings is the Democratic nominee, the Republican nomination will be worth something, for Tydings' re-election stock is hardly worth the paper it is written on . . . Almost every member of the Cabinet went to see Eddie Dowling's new show "Shadow and Substance" when it opened in Washington . . . Sir Cedric Hardwicke, star of the show, later lunched with Alice Roosevelt Longworth on the second floor of the Reptile House in the National Zoo . . . Sir Cedric is president of the Circus Fans of Great Britain, and the luncheon was given by Dr. William Mann, director of the Zoo and member of the Circus Fans of America . . . Alice Longworth was reared on political circuses.

Kra Canal Is Myth, Siamese Here Say

German, Seeking Job, Blamed for Rumors on Undesired Waterway

Upon a job-hunting German engineer was placed the blame today for circulating rumors that a vast canal was being constructed secretly across Siam as a short cut between Japan and Britain's colonies in India.

Reports that had reached all European nations said the canal, financed and engineered by Japanese interests, was regarded as a direct challenge to British supremacy in the Far East, and threatened the huge British naval base at Singapore.

In a statement to the Boston Evening American today the Siamese Alliance in America quoted Luang Pradist Manudharm, Siamese minister of foreign affairs, as denying that the Kra Canal had been started.

"There is absolutely no foundation for the statement that such a canal is contemplated," said the minister's statement. "It is not desirable economically or strategically. But the tale has found wide circulation since a German engineer has written to the minister, expressing his willingness to undertake the job."

To build a canal across Siam in secret would be an impossibility, members of the Alliance, student organization in this country, said today. Kaisui Nimmanahaeminda, Harvard student, who is secretary-treasurer of the organization, scoffed at the reports.

RAILWAY ON SPOT

"The Royal State Railway of Siam, operating between Bangkok and Penang, Straits Settlement, traverses the exact spot where it is rumored the Kre Canal is being built," he said. "If this rumor were true it would be known by the English and other European travelers, who are constantly using this international railway.

"Furthermore, intercoastal shipping lines on both sides of the Malay Peninsula also pass by within a short distance of the rumored location of the canal.

"If construction had actually started, passengers could easily sight it from the ships."

The Siamese Alliance also took exception to reports that the new premier of Siam, Colonel Phya Boal, was vested with absolute authority giving him power like that of a European dictator.

APPROVAL NEEDED

His policies must be approved by the Legislature, Nimmanahaeminda said, and a majority vote of non-confidence by the Assembly of People's Representatives is sufficient to remove him, or any member of his cabinet.

Although Siam is maintaining friendly relations with Japan, its connections with that country are no closer than with any other nation, its officials insist. Siamese students are sent to all leading European antions and the United States for their modern education. Recently Minister Manudharm admitted students were being sent also to Japan, which he explained as resulting from the needs of trade between the two countries.

Siam, like the United States, has been suffering from a flood of Japanese imports, and is seeking means to redress the balance of trade between the two countries, the minister explained.

"Progress in commercial and industrial intercourse between the two countries, it must be stressed once more, does not contain the least semblance of a background of political alliance, nor is it capable of having any repercussion whatever on the relations of Siam with other foreign nations," the foreign minister officially declared.

Kaisui Nimmanahaeminda, spokesman for the Siamese Alliance, is a second year student at the Harvard Business School. He is a graduate o fthe University of Pennsylvania in 1936 and comes from Chiengmai, Siam.

Britain Defies Jap River Ban

LONDON, Jan. 12 (AP)—Great Britain today refused to submit to an attempt by Japan to close the Yangtze river to neutral merchant shipping.

An informed source disclosed that Japan had suggested it would be impossible to permit the passage of non-Japanese vessels up China's great inland waterway, on which foreign ships have had the right to travel for almost a century.

The British government said this source, replied that it reserved the right to move British ships wherever it pleased in China waters.

Japanese to Seek Control of Shantung

SHANGHAI, Jan. 12 (AP)—hTe Japanese-dominated provisional government at Peiping planned today to keep pace with Japan's North China armies by taking over control of Shantung, China's "sacred" province.

Reports through Japanese channels told of the plan under which the Peiping regime would assume collection of taxes in the province of 34,000,000 population and receipt of customs at Tsingtao, rich port on the Yellow Sea.

U. S. Envoy Ready To Flee Hankow

HANKOW, Jan. 12 (AP)—In anticipation of a possible flight of the Chinese foreign office and other government departments from Hankow, United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson today sent Chinese members of his embassy staff to Chungking to arrange living quarters.

Chungking, in Szechwan province, nearly 900 miles up the winding Yangtze river from Hankow and nearly 1500 miles from the coast, already is the seat of Lin Sen, president of the national government.

Ambassador Johnson said he had no intention of moving to Chungking unless and until China's foreign office moves there, and there was no sign such was imminent.

Americans Urged to File Shanghai Loss Claims

SHANGHAI, Jan. 12 (AP)—The Shanghai American Chamber of Commerce tonight sent circulars to American business men who have suffered losses here as a result of the Chinese-Japanese conflict, suggesting that damage claims be filed immediately with the United States consulate-general.

China Is Getting U. S. Trucks, Japs Claim

Charge 500,000 Tons of Munitions Have Gone to Hongkong

SHANGHAI, Jan. 12 (INS)—Three thousand American and German trucks are being assembled at Hongkong for delivery to Chinese forces, Japanese authorities charged today.

Japanese officials also claimed that 500,000 tons of munitions already have been transported from Hongkong to Canton over a newly-built highway.

INCREASE FRICTION

In the past they have charged that German staff officers are advising Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, and have been brought diplomatic pressure to have these officers withdrawn.

Today, however, was the first time Germany has been accused openly of lending China material assistance.

The charges against America also increased the Japanese-American friction that flared so high at the time of the bombing of the United States gunboat Panay and three other American vessels by Japanese planes on the Yangtze river.

CHINESE RETREAT

Meanwhile, at Hankow, Chinese government officials finally admitted that the Chinese defenders of Taining were withdrawn yesterday afternoon. The retreat was staged, accordin gto the Chinese, after a fierce battle in which the Japanese attacking forces used tanks and heavy artillery.

The Chinese defeat of Taining opens the way for a Japanese assault against the capture of the vital Lunghai railway, "life-line" of China because of its strategic position in connecting the seacoast with the central part of the interior.

Reports from Hongkong stated that Japanese air raiders had been extremely active in South China, heavily bombing Chingyuan, Pasong, Yingtok, Yuentam, Tungkum and other points.

'Dead Cop' Had Lapse of Mind

Couldn't Remember Where He'd Been

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—"Come quick, a cop has been killed."

This telephone message brought one lieutenant, two sergeants and 12 patrolmen racing to the home of Sam Newman, Brooklyn insurance agent. Newman pointed to a policeman's shield, revolver and overcoat strung over his car parked at the curb. But there was no sign of the cop.

"He told me he couldn't for the life of him remember where he'd left them," Inspector Edward Shelvey said.

Vast Pacific Hides Fate Of Missing Clipper Ship

islands were made late yesterday and the naval plane returned to Pago Pago at nightfall.

2 Search Flights At Samoa Islands

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12 (AP)—Two searching flights have been made around the Samoan Islands by a navy plane without sighting the missing Pan-American survey Clipper, the airways company said today in an offical statement reviewing the disappearance of the big flying boat.

The statement said:

"Pan-American officials advised that their South Pacific survey plane, the Samoan Clipper, after radioing that it was returning to port after developing an oil leak in one of its four engines, 40 minutes after its departure yesterday morning from Pago Pago, en route to Auckland, New Zealand, has ont been heard from since 8:27 local Saoa time yesterday morning.

"The Samoan Clipper, under command of Captain Edwin C. Musick, on the first regular experimental transport flight over the newly established mail and express route between the United States and New Zealand, took off from the Samoan base at 5:30 a. m. Samoan time Tuesday.

LEAK REPORTED

"When 38 minutes out, placing it approximately 75 miles from the harbor of Pago Pago, the Clipper reported that one of the four engines had developed an oil leak, that they had set the propeller brakes on that motor and were returning toward Pago Pago, where they planned to land at 8:30.

"The Clipper returned northward as far as Apia harbor on the north coast of Upolu island, from which the approach is made for a landing in Pago Pago harbor. The next messages from the Clipper was received at 8:27, when it reporled leaving Apia harbor and signed off, advising that it was dumping its excess gasoline before returning to Pago Pago.

"No further word has been heard from the plane and naval authorities of Tutuila island assisted in organizing a search with the station boat Avocet and naval patrol plane.

CAPTAIN UNWORRIED

"In addition to the radio messages received from the plane, which at no time indicated that the captain anticipated any difficulties, they were also guided by a report from the Commercial radio operator at Apia that he had seen the plane turning seaward on its approach course to Pago Pago at aproximately the same time as the clipper reported over the same area.

"The naval plane made two searching flights to and around the island, returning to Pago Pago at nightfall. Meantime the station ship was dispatched to the vicinity of Apia where it was expected to arrive shortly after dawn.

"It was planned that the naval flying boat would proceed to the same area at daybreak this morninig to guide the surface vessel in its search."

Police Probing Court Blaze

The police arson squad today began investigation of the general alarm fire which swept through the top 11 floors of the 26-story Suffolk County Court House annex, endangering the lives of scores of firemen and threatening the district.

The blaze, which caused damage estimated at $40,000, was the third within the last few weeks. The others were believed to have bene set off by salamanders used to dry out concrete. Damage by the others was estimated at a total of $15,000.

Starting as heavy canvas coverings became ignited at the top of the building, the flames swept the entire upper structure, sending up a glare seen for 30 miles.

Huge embers floated to roofs of a score of nearby buildings, but all were extinguished by firemen or watchmen without damage.

Officials said the damage was covered by insurance.

Tearful Defendant Tells How Shooting Accident Occurred

Pale and crying, Alfred J. Langis, 22-year-old Revere youth who shot his brother to death Christmas Day, was released from Chelsea court today after a manslaughter charge against him had been dismissed.

With tears in his eyes and heavy black circles under his eyes, Langis told Judge Paul J. MacDonald that he and his 23-year-old brother, Alden, whom he was charged with killing, were as close and devoted as brothers could be.

They went everywhere together, he said, and often spent afternoons in the yard i nthe back of their home on Mills avenue, Revere. Theye were there Christmas, Alfred said, shooting at tin cans with a target pistol when the .25-caliber automatic jammed.

Alfred was attempting to open the side chamber to release the bullet, he said, when the gun went off and the missle penetrated his brother's heart. Rushed to Lynn Hospital, Alden died without regaining consciousness.

Two of Alfred's seven remaining brothers were in court, but neither his mother nor his father were there, for the spectre of bad luck was following Alfred two days after Christmas as he was driving his mother and father to Lynn to inquire about cemetery lots for his dead brother.

He was involved in an auto accident that sent his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Langis, to Lynn Hospital wih severe injuries. The father received a possiblef racture of the spine.

Judge MacDonald found "no probable cause" after police officers had confirmed the youth's testimony and ordered him set free.

Woman, 2 Babes Saved in Fire

A grandmother and her two grandchildren were rescued from possible death early today by four Malden firemen, as fire swept their home in Lynn street.

The woman, Mrs. Margaret Corey and the two children, Mary, five, and Marguerite Johnson, 3, were trapped in their bedrooms on the third floor when firemen reached the house.

While their mates set up a protective water curtain, Lieutenant Jeremiah Donohue, and Firemen Fred Whalen, George Derenne and Malcolm McIntyre, donning gas masks, plunged into smoke filled hallway to save the trio.

Two other children, Eleanor Parker, 14 and Waren Truett living on the first floor of the building, were led to safety by Mrs. Ethel Parker, who discovered the fire. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Johnson, parents of the rescued children, made their own way to safety over a rear stairway. Damage was estimated at $5500.

ceptable" candidate—against Governor Hurley.

First choice, according to report, was Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, but Dever has announced he is "not interested" in running for Governor now.

He's definitely a candidate for 1940, however, he declared—and that, it is said, threatens further complications, sing the President's son, James Roosevelt, is reported grooming himself as a candidate for the Governor's chair that year.

It typifies, it was said, the revolt within the New Deal's own ranks against "planned economy" at the expense of the industrial states.

CHILD LABOR STAND

Chief of Governor Hurley's "offences" against the New Deal program are his opposition to the proposed child labor amendment, and his opposition to New Deal efforts to seize control of power facilities incidental to its Merrimack and Connecticut river valleys flood control projects.

In his recent message opening the Massachusetts Legislature, Governor Hurley thanked the legislators who stood with him and defeated the Child Labor Amendment. The Governor has explained that his opposition was not to the principle of eradicating child labor, but to the language of the bill, which, it was feared would penalize Massachusetts industry while giving unfair advantage to other states.

Nevertheless, President Roosevelt, according to Washington observers, has chosen to regard the governor's message in this connection as "a slap in the face."

CHURCH STAND CITED

Buckley supporters today claimed, on the other hand, that Governor Hurley has lost one of his biggest supports in his stand against the child labor amendment as written.

High church officials who let it be known that they, too, were opposed to the proposed amendment in its present form, have withdrawn their opposition, Buckley's friends insisted.

The church officials in question, however, have declined to put their withdrawal or their support of the proposed amendment into writing, or to be quoted directly on their position.

Buckley's reported selection as second choice upon Attorney-General Dever's refusal to carry the New Deal torch was not exactly a surprise to politicians.

Dutch Freighter Sunk by Sub

MADRID, Jan. 12 (AP)—Witnesses reported today seeing the Netherlands freighter Hannah mysteriously torpedoed, sink off the eastern coast of Spain.

The sinking but not actual attack by an unidentified submarine was observed from the lighthouse on Cape San Antonio, off which the ship was attacked yesterday.

The 2730-ton vessel, bound for Valencia with a cargo of food, went down about 47 miles south of that city.

(Earlier reports were in conflict on whether the Hannah was sunk or merely damaged.)

The lighthouse witnesses said the crew took to lifeboats and reached shore safely with the aid of boats from Alicante and Javea.

'Secret Service' Spy on N. Y. Police

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—Establishment of a miniature "secret service" within the New York Police Department by Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine today indicated the tightest clamping down of the lid on vice and gambling in the history of the city.

Twenty-five police lieutenants who have passed their civil service examinations for captaincies were called in and assigned to a job that will virtually make them "spies" on the rank and file of police officials. They are to "operate for stricter enforcement of morals."

Harbor Battle Ends in Court

A fierce battle raged in Boston Harbor early today aboard the city ferryboat Donovan. And as a result four unemployed and homeless seamen were arraigned in municipal court.

They were arrested following a free-for-all on the vessel as it plied between Boston and East Boston. Police said jobless sailors have been seeking refuge from the cold on the ferryboat.

Judge Jennie Loitman Barron sentenced William Geary to 10 days in the House of Correction on a charge of drunkenness and gave Walter Lewis a suspended one-month term on an assault and battery charge. He was placed on probation. The cases of James N. Glennon and Fordan Poland, both charged with assault and battery, were continued until Friday.

Barbara Begged Fay's Love in Note

Wrote to Ex-Hubby; Letters Read In Court Tilt

BARBARA STANWYCK
Loses Court Fight
International News Photograph Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12 (AP)—Frank Fay, actor and master of ceremonies, has a date tomorrow to visit the home of his divorced wife, Barbara Stanwyck, and chat with their adopted son, Dion.

Overruling the movie actress' contention that Fay was not fit to have custody of the five-year-old boy, Judge Goodwin Knight issued an order permitting Fay to take the child to his home every other Saturday, and to visit him every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at Miss Stanwick's residence.

"I won everything I asked for," Fay commented after the bitter court fight. "I merely wanted to see Dion, and I haven't been able to do so."

There were certain stipulations in the court order:

LIQUOR RESTRICTIONS

Fay may not see the child if he has liquor on him, "externally or internally." Neither may he have a friend around who has been drinking. Dion is to be taken to Fay's home at 10 a. m. every other Saturday by his nurse, who is to remain with the child until 5 p. m. and then return him to Miss Stanwyck's home.

Miss Stanwyck and Fay have been quarreling about Dion's custody several months. The court order ended four days of legal bickering highlighted by an affidavit filed by Miss Stanwyck's attorney, suggesting that Fay be subjected to a psychatric examination.

However, Miss Stanwyck testified:

"I don't think he is insane."

Fay's lawyers tried to show Miss Stanwyck didn't want Fay around because she frequently entertained Robert Taylor, screen Adonis. The actress admitted Taylor visited her home often and played with Dion.

COURT BARS REFERENCE

The court then intervened with the admonition:

"I don't care how many times Mr. Taylor visits Miss Stanwyck. That is their personal life and has no place in this proceeding."

Miss Stanwyck told the court she divorced Fay because he drank to excess. She said he sometimes was drunk a month at a time. She said she was not in love with Fay when she went through a Catholic church wedding to him seven years after the civil service that united them. The couple separated in 1935.

Fay's lawyers called Monsignor Nicholas Connelly of Santa Monica, who said he knew Fay as a "good and charitable" man.

"You would not say that a man who habitually drank to excess was fit to have custody of a small child, would you?" asked Charles Cradick, Miss Stanwyck's counsel.

"Certainly not," replied the monsignor, "but I have not seen Mr. Fay intoxicated."

Later, Judge Knight asked Fay how many times he had been drunk.

"DRUNK 15 TIMES"

"Fifteen times in my life, altogether," answered Fay, "but I never drank at all until I was 23, and I have been 'on the wagon' for the last year."

Philip Stern, Fay's counsel, got around to Miss Stanwyck's association with Taylor when he had her on cross-examination.

"Isn't it a fact," he asked, "that Mr. Taylor gave Dion a $50 check for Christmas and that it was returned because of insufficient funds?"

The red-haired actress didn't have to reply to that one, for her lawyers objected and were sustained by the court.

As the trial neared its conclusion, Miss Stanwyck disclosed to reporters that her studio (RKO) had taken "disciplinary action" against her and suspended her for her refusal to take a part assigned to her.

She said the action had nothing to do with the custody fight, and that she expected to resume work later. The studio confirmed her statement about the breach.

LETTERS TO FAY

"Whatever you do, love me," pleaded a letter which Miss Stanwyck wrote to Fay during an estrangement and which was introduced in court. It read:

"Dear Kid:

"No need to tell you that I felt blue when you left. I can't stand your being unhappy in any way at all. Whatever you want to do, I am with you 100 per cent, only—I do not wish you to sacrifice yourself in any way. I can live any place or go any way with you.

"I love you just as much as it is possible for a woman to love a man. If I was born with anything fine in me, and I choose to think I was, from what I know of my mother and father, you have brought that fineness to the surface.

"I cannot imagine life without you and I am not being 'melodramatic.'

"I probably do not give you that impression at any time—that of not being able to imagine life without you, I mean. However, that is due to the lack of education and not being able to express myself clearly in speech.

BEGS HIS LOVE

"I can write it, however. You are always right about everything—so you must be right about what you want to do. Only please, Frank, whatever you do, love me. And wherever you go, take me. For there I shall be content.

"With all my heart, God bless you. BARBARA."

A second letter, apparently written for Fay's birthday and dated November 17, 1934, read:

"Dear Kid:

"I haven't any grand present to give you this year, no diamonds, no watch, no nothing!

"I feel kinda funny not sending you anything, but it just has to be.

PRAYERS FOR HIM

"However, I can wish you many more of them and may they be happy and healthy and full of content. And my personal wish, that they be spent with me.

"But when prayers are heard in Heaven, and I hope that mine are- they are filled with you and for you. And, so Frank, all I have to give you today is my prayers that all be well for you. And whatever you do shall be right, and that God will keep your path well lighted so that you will never hurt yourself. God bless you and spare you. BARBARA."

Pane Breaking Just Friendly

Commenting that inasmuch as "this window-breaking is all among friends," Judge Arthur P. Stone today continued the case of Miss Lila Bell, 38, of Cherry street, Cambridge, to May 12 on the promise that Miss Bell will break no more plate glass windows.

Police Officer Francis Barry testified he was seated in a real estate office on River street, Cambridge, the night of December 31, and saw Miss Bell throw something against the window, breaking it. He had been stationed there because of numerous complaints of window breaking in the neighborhood.

In East Cambridge district court today no defense was offered, but it was explained that Miss Bell had been a friend of the realtor, Harry Hildreth, and that they had had a "falling out."

Science Fights Marine Borer With Mud

Cambridge Inventor Devises Shield For Pilings

By ROBERT L. GREEN

"Mud in your eye!" is a Cambridge inventor's toast to three waterfront gentlemen of parts.

The three whose names are probably unfamiliar to you are Messrs. Limnoria Ligerum, Chelura Terabrans and Teredo Navalis, and they have been engaged in an insidious campaign of undermining all along the New England coast.

The gentlemen, are commonly known as "marine borers" and for years have placed themselves on an exclusive million dollar diet of pier pilings.

FIGHT ON SINCE 1922

Since 1922 science has been conducting extensive researches in the identities, migration and habits of the marine borer. At present there is a body known as the New England Marine Piling Investigation Committee whose problem is to check the attack of the underwater destroyers along the New England coast.

John Upton, the Cambridge inventor, lined up a few marine biological facts and went to work on the "pier-eaters."

Marine borers, Upton discovered, have to breathe just as fish do. Hence his invention was designed to literally take away the breath of Messrs. Limnoria Lignorum, Chelura Terabrams and Teredo Navalis.

Inspecting pilings partially eaten away by the borers Upton had noticed that the end buried in the mud was untouched. This confirmed his suspicion that the borers could not work without air.

Decided Mr. Upton, why not put the whole piling in mud? This he did by devising a shield to fit around the piling as a container for the protecting mud.

The shield is made of cylindrical sections of pure commercial iron that telescope over each other and the space between piling and shield is packed with mud.

A specially designed hose keeps the shield continually centered and prevents any leakage of the mud filling.

The shield, it is estimated, will last 15 years.

PLAN TO SPEED SHIPS

Arrangements to speed up passage of ships through quarantine in Boston harbor were reported today by the United States Health Sevice. Cutters with boarding officers will leave dock at an earlier hour each morning and ships will be fumigated either at dock or in the stream at the option of their owners.

186 Get Jobless Cash O. K.

An analysis of the first 600 claims filed by jobless men and women for benefits under the Massachusetts Unemployment Compensation Law showed today that 186 persons will be entitled to receive benefit checks ranging from $5 to $15 for a period of five weeks.

Forty-two persons will receive checks for a three-week period, 70 persons for a four-week period, 186 persons for a five-week period, 113 persons for a six-week period, 56 persons for a seven-week period, 94 for an eight-week period, 35 persons for a nine-week period and 10 persons for a ten-week period.

In the case of the 10 eligible persons who will receive compensation for 10 weeks if they remain unemployed their benefits will, in each case, amount to $15 a week, the analysis shows.

Nazi Foe Keeps His Ship Lines

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—The Red Star and Bernstein Shipping Lines will not be confiscated by the German government, even though Arnold Bernstein is in a Nazi prison for "treason," his official representative asserted today.

Bernstein, head of the lines, recently was sentenced to 2½ years and fined $400,000 for violating Germany's complicated foreign exchange regulations by establishing a secret fund in America.

H. A. Kolimar, a bank official, and Bernstein's closest friend, admitted that a private investor would be welcomed as a purchaser.

Youth Will Face Bad Check Charge

A youth, who came to America from British Columbia a few months ago and who has been missing from his rooming house in Waltham for three months, was arrested by Boston police today and will be charged with issuing more than 30 false checks.

The youth, who will appear in Boston municipal court, allegedly admitted to officers that he has been living in all-night theaters, vagrant homes and other places, and occasionally issuing checks for small amounts to cover purchases of furniture, food and clothing.

Girl Who Chased Thief Is Praised

"Lonely Hearts Club" Lauds Radcliffe Student

Brave

She Saved Coat For Owner

RUTH JONES
Led Chase, But Glad Thief Freed

Ruth Jones, Radcliffe freshman who ran through Harvard Yard in pursuit of a thief who had snatched an overcoat, was covered with confusion when she found that her courage had won public commendation from the "Harvard Lonely Hearts Club."

Ruth is by no means the Amazon type. On the contrary, she is very feminine—blonde and willowy. Rimless glasses and sports clothes complete the picture of a serious, pretty student.

"I can't imagine what made me do it," she said. "I've never done anything like that before.

NOTICED THIEF

"But I had noticed this man, who seemed to be following us girls, on our way to the choral rehearsal in Sever Hall. He was alone, and he came right into the building when we did.

"I somehow felt that he was not a student, and when we were taking our coats off I watched him. Suddenly he grabbed an overcoat from the table and started to walk out.

"I didn't stop to think, but ran after him, saying:

"'That's not your coat!' Then he started to run, and I chased him. I didn't even realize that I was yelling, until the Harvard boys took up the chase and caught him."

FREED WITH WARNING

The thief was not held, but after he returned the coat was released with a warning.

"I'm glad they let him go," said the Radcliffe girl. "It probably taught him a lesson, and I'd dislike having helped to send anyone to jail."

She refused to comment on the bid for dates, made by the "Lonely Hearts Club of Harvard," but seemed amused.

Lewis in Blast At Dubinsky

and whose organization claims membership of more than 250,000 persons, also assailed Communistic influence in the CIO in speaking to the leaders of his group.

The AFL, Dubinsky said, had made concessions on the questions of industrial unionism and the curbing of the power of the executive council to suspend affiliated organizations—two vital issues.

He denied assertions, made by other CIO leaders when negotiations were suspended, that the AFL wanted the ten original CIO unions to desert the other CIO affiliates as a condition of peace.

BLASTS STATEMENTS

"I say emphatically it is not true," he said. "The basis of agreement reached was that none of the CIO unions come back until all matters in dispute had been adjusted through sub-committees and that the CIO unions return as a unified group.

He said the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, one of the first to break away from the AFL, would remain with the CIO but would press for peace.

"We do not believe that withdrawal of any one union either from the AFL or CIO would promote the cause of peace," he said. "But it is our definite conviction that peace will ultimately have to be established in the labor movement."

Dubinsky said defeat of the wage-hour bill in Congress "would never have taken place if labor had been united."

Holdup Suspects Seized by G-Men

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (INS)—Arrest at Houston, Tex., of Hugh Gant, 37, and his brother-in-law, Alva Hunt, 36, sought in connection with eight Southern bank robberies, was announced today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The bureau said the pair, and Hunt's sweetheart, Miss Alene Bledsoe, 20, surrendered without resistance, though both men were carrying .45-caliber automatic pistols.

Final Hearing For DiStasio

Governor Hurley today set next Friday for a final hearing on a petition for the commutation of the death sentence of Anthony DiStasio, who with his father, Frank, is scheduled to be executed next week for the torch murder of a West End laborer.

The governor's action followed a conference with William R. Scharton, counsel to the youth. Further possible action by the executive council is dependent on the chief executive's decision at the hearing.

State House attaches declared that the execution, ordered during the week of Jan. 17, might be delayed until after the Council meets next Tuesday.

The father was convicted of first degree murder of Daniel Crowley in an insurance plot in 1935 and Anthony found guilty of acting as an accessory before the fact.

Youth in Store Break Seized

Surprising him as he crawled through the window of a Roslindale store early today, police captured a 23-year-old South End youth after a chase during which four shots were fired.

Police cruising cars were closely guarding the district after a route officer discovered the window of a South street jewelry store had been smashed and $150 loot taken.

A short time later, Patrolman Thomas Kelly and Edward Givens raced to Cummins highway and Sycamore street, when a citizen reported a youth had smashed the window of a variety store.

Does Your Breath Broadcast—"I WEAR FALSE TEETH"?

Play Safe—Be Sure—Use Polident

Most people who wear plates or bridges suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it—but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing cannot prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing can stop "denture breath"—and that's Polident! This new brushless cleaner for false teeth has won the approval of thousands of dentists. Users say it is a great blessing.

Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tarnish and deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 30¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if you are not delighted.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

U. S. Steel Aide In Secret Talk With Lewis

New York Conference Surprises; Both Dodge Queries

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—A star-chamber conference between John L. Lewis, CIO chieftain, and Tom Moses, vice-president of the United States Steel Corporation and noted Pittsburgh industrialist, broke up here early this afternoon.

Both principals declined comment on the subject of the meeting which, unscheduled—in fact, denied even while it was in progress—came as a complete surprise to labor and financial circles here.

Lewis waved aside questions with the vague assertion that his meeting with Moses was only a "coal conference."

CIO CONTRACT PENDING

Although logic of this statement was apparent in view of Moses' position as head of the Frick Coal and Coke Company, his other role as a chief lieutenant in "Big Steel" led to speculation that the talk might also have revolved around the CIO contract now binding plants of U. S. Steel to a wage scale and collective bargaining with the CIO.

That contract, negotiated by the president of a subsidiary company and Phil Murray, head of the steel workers' organizing committee, was signed last year at Pittsburgh. Previous to today's meeting, it had not been expected that negotiations for extension or modification of the contract would open until early next month.

"SECRET" MEETING

Every effort had been made to keep the meeting secret. While it was in progress, a reporter telephoned Moses' room and asked:

"What are you and Mr. Lewis talking about?"

Moses professed astonishment over the question. He was not, he said, conferring with anybody.

Shortly thereafter, however, two luncheons went in on trays to Moses' suite, and soon both principals left the hotel.

The Brighter Side

(Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

By DAMON RUNYON

Damon Runyon

The good Colonel Edward Riley Bradley arrived at Palm Beach recently, took down the shutters on his famous little old drum, aired out the premises and presently the gentle whirr of the roulette pills were mingling their music with the overtones of the sad sea waves.

In short, the good colonel "got going," so that the slight tinge of sadness the reader may have noted in a column a short time ago dealing with the supposedly impending demise of Colonel Bradley's establishment may be regarded as null and void. We wept too soon.

Our obituary on the colonel's casino, which for years has been as much a part of the scenery at Palm Beach as the palm trees all leaning one way, was based on a slight misunderstanding of an order from the governor of Florida, Mr. Fred O. Cone.

This order was directed to the sheriffs of the three southernmost counties of the state directing them to close all "illegal" gambling, and the only form of gambling, outside of the stock market, that is legal in Florida, is the pari-mutuels at the horse and dog tracks and the Jai Lai Fronton.

COLONEL SKEPTICAL

Colonel Bradley's roulette wheels and hazard games are scarcely pari-mutuel operations, and it was assumed that Governor Cone's order would shutter the premises where the high rollers of society once gambled to who-laid-the-rail, as well as all other premises in the three counties that dealt in pastimes of a similar nature.

It may be, of course, that Colonel Bradley did not hear of the order. He is a busy man, and can scarcely be expected to listen to all the trivia that drifts around. On the other hand, he may have heard of it, and did not believe it. We imagine that the colonel's long experience in Florida has made him slightly skeptical, even of gubernatorial orders.

In any event, Colonel Bradley unveiled his devices at his usual time, and opened his restaurant, and thus continues to preserve a good old tradition of the empire of the sun. The Palm Beachers breathed a sigh of relief. If you took Bradley's away from them, they would be reduced to their one other pastime, which is knocking each other.

BAR MIAMI BETTING

The friends and admirers of Governor Cone say that his order was grossly misinterpreted, anyway. They say that "illegal" gambling, as he meant it, is booking on the horse races away from the tracks. This outside booking was shut off in the Miami area when the racing season came on, and you now have almost as much trouble making a bet in downtown Miami as breathing.

Governor Cone apparently deems the race track pari-mutuels an institution that must be protected, but outside of booking on the races, gambling continued in Broward County after the order, this being the first county north of the Miami area, and the first county south of Palm Beach County.

There was no gambling in the Miami area after the order with perhaps the exception of a few "sneak joins," but our diplomatic representatives inform us that an agreement was reached under which two spots will be permitted to open in Miami this week, and three on Miami Beach. Our representatives fail to inform up how an agreement of this nature is reached and who reaches it, and that is something that excites our curiosity.

Cudahy-Henry Chicago Nuptials Interests Boston Society

By BETTY ALDEN

CHICAGO IS KNOWN as the Windy City . . . but Mary Morison must have created a few gusts and whirlwinds on her own hook during the last few days . . .

In the latter part of last week she arrived in Chicago to prepare for her role as bridesmaid in the fashionable wedding ceremony of Annie May Henry and Michael Cudahy, which was performed yesterday afternoon at the Henrys' suburban home in Lake Forest, Illinois . . .

MARY MORISON

Anyone who thinks that getting fitted to a bridesmaid's gown and attending showers, parties and rehearsals, all in the space of three days, does not necessitate a bit of breezing around, should take it up as a reducing exercise . . .

Both Lucile and Eleanor Swift are cousins of yesterday's bride, but they were unable to go on for the ceremony, which took place in the drawing room of the Henry home at 4 o'clock yesterday . . . Though the wedding was strictly a family affair the number of guests representing the various branches of the Swift, Henry and Cudahy families was by no means small . . .

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Henry, and she is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift of the famous packing company . . .

The bridegroom, son of the Edward Cudahys, is the namesake of his grandfather, pioneer in the packing company which bears his name . . .

Mr. Cudahy was best man for his son and among the ushers was Gordon Palmer, brother-in-law of Mrs. Potter Palmer, 3d (Rose Saltonstall Movius), who was a belle of Boston society a few years ago . . .

Bride's Sister Is Matron of Honor

MRS. GORDON KELLY, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and the bridegroom's sister, Leonore Cudahy, was maid of honor . . . In addition to Mary Morison, the bridesmaids included Jane Swift, a prominent Chicago deb, who gave a large dinner dance Saturday evening for the bridal party . . . Adair Orr, Betty Keith and Ann Winston, member of another old Chicago family, were also bridesmaids and clubbed together to give a dinner party at one of Chicago's popular night clubs a few evenings before the wedding . . . Other members of the bridal party were Anne Bryant, William B. Cudahy, Howard Gillette, Jr., Dodge Freeman, Garfield King and Charles Kirkland . . . The bride and bridegroom are going to Honolulu for their honeymoon . . .

Mary met Annie May on a North Cape cruise a couple of years ago . . . and since Annie May attended Concord Academy she has a number of friends among the younger social set in Boston . . .

Mary was the house guest of the Henrys up to the time of the wedding . . . but now she is visiting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Pierce, at their home in Winnetka, Illinois, before returning home this coming week-end . . . She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Morison of Louisburg Square . . .

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sohier, Jr., of Beacon street, are giving a dinner party this evening in honor of J. Watson Webb, Jr., son of the famous international polo player, who is in Boston for a brief visit . . .

Following dinner, Mr. Webb will give the first showing of his colored moving pictures of Alaskan big game, at the New England Museum of Natural History . . .

John K. Howard, president of the museum, will be one of the front row lights at the showing of the pictures . . . for he is a big game hunter himself, and will find much of interest in the pictorial account of Mr. Webb's travels into the thick of Alaskan wilderness . . .

Myopia Hunt Club's Trip Recorded

"IF YOU DON'T like New England," said Mark Twain, "just wait a while" . . . or words to that effect . . .

And the same applies to the New England countryside . . . If you don't like the type and contour of your surroundings, just climb aboard a train and wait a while . . .

That's what the complete entourage of the Myopia Hunt Club . . . men, women, horses and dogs . . . does at least once each year . . .

Among those who ride to hounds there are endless discussions on the merits of the British type of long distance hunt runs over rolling meadows as against comparatively short, hard ridden American hunts over broken terrain . . . Hunt riders in other sections of the country must delve into the pros and cons of the subject over tankards in club and tack rooms, but New England's wide variety of countryside gives her native enthusiasts the opportunity to try both types of run . . .

Hunt runs in the vicinity of Boston are, of necessity, over a short, broken route . . . so once a year the members of Myopia Hunt Club take a special train to New Hampshire, where the rolling fields offer conditions almost identical to those in the tight little isle where fox hunting was made famous . . .

A pictorial history of the annual trip which the Myopians took recently from Hamilton to Hampton, N. H., appears in the current issue of Town and Country . . . Photographs show such well known riders as Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Mary Curtis, Howland Seabury, Martha Proctor and Kay Winthrop loaded down with lunch baskets getting into the day coaches, while horses and dogs are being loaded into baggage cars at the other end of the train . . . Impromptu rubbers of bridge and nibbling at the contents of the lunch baskets whiled away the time for Mrs. Joe Woods, Tillie Tuckerman and her father, Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Appleton, Jr., until the expedition reached the starting place and everything was in readiness for the run . . .

Other well known North Shoreites pictured in the series include Gordon Prince, M. F. H., and Mrs. Prince, Mrs. Neil Rice, Jack Grant, Mattocks White, Alice Thorndike, Mrs. Gilbert Steward and E. H. Haley . . .

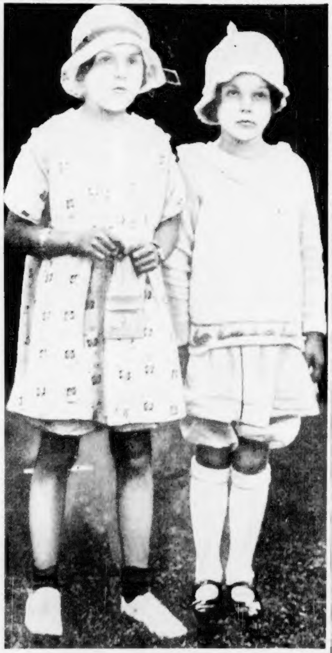
THE FAMILY ALBUM



EVERYONE likes to pore over the old family album. Here is an interesting picture from the family album of Boston society. The title of this picture should read like a "Believe It Or Not" for the two little girls are now among the most sophisticated members of the debutante and post-deb set. Can you recognize them? They are idetnified on Page 16.

Tea is the drink!

'SALADA' TEA

SALADA IS THE TEA

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

TEN PIECES of new legislation will be proposed in Atty. Gen. Paul A. Dever's report, which will be released within four days . . . "Document No. 12" is the official title of the report, and it is described by one who knows its contents as "an amazing document." Rackets and crime-fighting come in for their due.

Among the "big shots" in town last night were Paul Runyon, New York, vice-president in charge of production of one of the major air chains (at the Cocoanut Grove) and Stephen Paul, the Wall Street man recognized as an arbiter in international finance . . . Due today is John Schaaf the Gotham engineering marvel.

If you hear "Buddy" Clark singing "Rosalie" as the nation's No. 1 Song tonight it may be interesting to know that the Boston singer went on record with this column three weeks ago as predicting that the song would be the "No. 1 Song" within a month . . . But he didn't know then that he would sing the number when it was moved to the top of the heap.

First of the replacements on District Attorney Foley's staff of assistants predicted in this column will come true Monday when Hyman Goldman of Dorchester takes the post held by Samuel G. Thorner . . . The reason that it has not become officially "City Treasurer" McCarthy is that the Mansfield treasurer, John Dorsey, is ill . . . Mayor Tobin will visit with Dorsey before he names his successor . . . Any day now. Jed Harris, Broadway "wonder boy" of the waning '20s when he produced "Broadway," "Front Page," "Coquette" and "The Royal Family," all hits without a miss in the succession, is bringing his first show in years to Boston a week from Monday. The title is "Our Town."

HAY, HAY!—

Down at the Colonial Inn in Winthrop, some of the air pilots are heckling the proprietor by paraphrasing the well-known song so that it sings: "Have you got any cattle that you want to have fed, baby?" . . . Two of the fliers decided to try out that part of an inkeeper's license which compels the boniface "to serve the weary traveller and his cattle" . . . So they produced a hungry horse, and demanded food for the animal. The horse was fed.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:—

The Bostonian who has been reported on frequent appearances in downtown restaurants, carrying his own celluloid spoon, knife and fork braved one of the night-clubs with his utensils last night . . . Middlesex's only Democratic County Commissioner, Tom Brennan, got his chance finally to be on the majority. Two associate commissioners were pressed into service when the two Republicans were unable to attend a meeting . . . One of the associates was a Democrat. The Democratic majority voted to raise the pay of scrubwomen employed in county buildings. And the lone Republican made it unanimous.

A fate similar to that of the pilot killed Sunday at East Boston was beckoning Cameraman Benedict FitzGerald, flying a small plane, over Lawrence . . . It was cold at 4000 feet, and FitzGerald dropped to two thousand. Then, as he pulled on the throttle, the handle came off in his hands. The motor cut dead. The pilot reached under the seat, grabbed a piece of cable and the motor started up. He limped into East Boscton.

Larry Thornton will be held over at the Mayfair with tonight's new show . . . Walter Kane, Lynn and Deering, De Mar and D'Andrea are the other acts, and Jack Berry is the new vocalist with Joe Smith's band . . . Sally Curley White, wife of the former city censor, has thrived in the Florida climate, and will return to Boston next week . . . The music publishers' Boston representatives presented Lew Conrad a watch as a farewell token last night. The band-leader leaves January 20 for Hollywood, where he will act and sing and play with Monogram Pictures.

One of the state's leading legal and political lights told the writer today that nearly 1,500,000 persons are directly or indirectly supported by government agencies in Massachusetts. The figure includes PWA workers, welfare recipients, city, state, county and federal employes . . . Candidate for D. A. Owen A. Gallagher, is chairman of the committee arranging the Boston College Varsity Club dinner at the University Club on February 2 . . . Judge John J. Burns, friend and associate of Joseph P. Kennedy, who is B. C. '21, will be the principal speaker.

Atty. Henry Talty of Boston will declare his candidacy for the Suffolk County district attorney's job in the near future . . . Dave McCarthy of Medford has his following as successor to Joe McGrath, as chairman of the Democratic State Committee. He's vice-chairman now . . . This column is told that U. S. Senator Walsh, at the Jackson Dinner, bluntly told a group of prominent politicians that he would insist on the McGrath appointment.

Gable Out Of Butler Role

Gary Cooper Likely To Get 'Gone With The Wind' Part

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor International News Service

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

Louella O. Parsons

You've heard of the gentleman. His name is Gary Cooper and, cross my heart, he's now being strongly considered for the part which was to have been Clark Gable's before David Selznick decided not to sign a releasing contract with Leo the Lion.

You can bet all the money you own that Clark Gable won't be Rhett Butler now. M-G-M won't loan him since they're none too happy over losing the Selznick pictures. And you can also put a small wager on David remaining with United Artists under terms highly agreeable to himself. Meanwhile, George Cukor, who directs "Gone With the Wind," is working on "Holiday" with Donald Ogden Stewart writing the dialogue.

Alice Brady, who has taken on new and added interest as a dramatic actress since her really superb performance in "In Old Chicago," checks into Universal City to co-star with Charlie Winninger. This pair of prime troupers will be seen in the former Gleason vehicle, "Shannons of Broadway," to be renamed "Goodbye Broadway."

Up to the time Darryl Zanuck saw Alice as Mrs. O'Leary, the studios couldn't be convinced that she was good for anything but Zany comedy roles. But wait now and see how many dramatic tidbits float her way.

Robert Donat is coming to Hollywood again. He hasn't been here since he was starred in "The Count of Monte Cristo" and made a lot of money for Eddie Small, its producer, and reaped plenty of fame for himself. He will sign a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer very shortly and the studio will at once begin a search for stories for the young man whose one American screen appearance was so spectacular. In that list is Dr. Cronin's fine book, "The Citadel." That, of course, will be filmed in England with Donat as the doctor. It's one of the few novels about a physician that the medical men themselves approve.

You can take my word for it that "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" is a swell picture and 12-year-old Tommy Kelly from the Bronx will become a star just as soon as it is released. Tommy goes to New York for the opening of his picture February 10, and what is probably more important to Tommy, he will play host to all his former classmates at St. Raymond's school at the Music Hall opening.

As though that weren't enough to make any youngster dizzy, Tommy will also be an honor guest at the children's party on the lawn of the White House on the President's birthday along with Janet Gaynor and other Hollywood stars.

A Line or Two: Page the HAYS office! There's a quickie producer over at the old Victory studio making a nudist picture! . . . "Three Men in the Snow" has been retitled "Paradise for Three," and will be released as an "A" instead of a "B," which means it's better than MGM expected . . . Walt Disney ducks his head in shame every time DEANNA DURBIN'S name is mentioned. An agent brought DEANNA out to his studio a long time ago to be the "voice" of "Snow White" and WALT turned her down. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Play's Title Baffled 'Em

Perhaps the most baffling problem connected with producing the play now called "Yes, My Darling Daughter," which comes to the Plymouth Theater, Monday evening, January 24, under auspices of the American Theater Society, was finding a suitable title for it.

Mark Reed, the author, had originally called his work "Mother's Day." Alfred DeLiagre, Jr., the producer, didn't like that. "All About Love" was Mr. Reed's second suggestion, and Mr. DeLiagre didn't like that either. The author was asked to think up some new ideas, and practically all of Mr. DeLiagre's friends, the theater staff and his own assistants were asked to help.

Among the suggestions were "The Hickory Limb," "Sauce for the Gander," "Don't Go Near the Water" and "Lightning Strikes Twice." They were considered briefly and then thrown into the discard. Finally, someone suggested "Yes, My Darling Daughter," which met with unanimous approval.

"Mother, mother, may I go out,
May I go out to swim?"
"Yes, my darling daughter,
Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,

New Brookline Theater

BRAD LOSES IN BRUSH WITH BOSTON POLICE

LAW STEPS IN. Officer Hemsworth arrests Brad at Huntington and Massachusetts for speeding flashy Cord. Arrest in close-up above. The three persons circled below will be paid $5 by Boston American on calling at this office.

IN MORNICK'S POWER. Sheila enters house, presumably following her brother Mickey, only to find herself apparently alone with Big Gus Mornick, Boston rackets king. "Well, girlie, I don't know how you found your way to this joint," Mornick leers, "but you sure do brighten it up!" How will Sheila extricate herself?

FOLLOW THE ROMANCE OF SHEILA KELLY AND BRAD OF HARVARD DAILY IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

SHEILA WALKS INTO HANDS OF RACKETEER

Read This First --- Then Go On With the Story

GAY, young, beautiful — that's Sheila Kelly when this story opens. Heart free, too, except for Attorney Jerry O'Donovan, former B. C. football star, whom she vaguely thinks of as her future husband. But Sheila's glad to have a temporary job at the State House so she can contribute to the support of her family —Barney, her father, injured in the police strike, Patsy, her pleasure-loving 26-year-old sister; and her mother. She shares her father's ambitions too for her brother, Mickey. But Mickey would rather be a pugilist than a lawyer.

In protecting Patsy from the consequences of a "pick-up date" Sheila meets Bradford Cabot Talton, Harvard student and son of an old and wealthy Beacon street family. Brad seeks to make an easy conquest. But Sheila turns him down cold. Not, however, before Jerry has seen them together.

Though she doesn't know it, Sheila has also attracted the interest of Big Gus Mornick, boss of the Boston rackets, who wants a secret report on racketeering she has transcribed. He assigns one of his torpedos, Greefy Koopman, to shadow her, but Greefy's methods are crude, and he only gets a beating up from Jerry.

Meanwhile, the Kelly home acquires two non-paying guests—Delphine Barton, Sheila's older sister and Delphine's small son, Timmy. Del has parted from her husband Vincent Barton, a Jamaica Plain [illegible] who [illegible] like Bing Crosby but has a weak spot for blondes and [illegible].

The home situation doesn't improve any when Mickey insists on pursuing a pugilistic career in the face of his father's orders. Learning that Mickey intends to appear at the Boston Arena, and that her father knows it, Sheila goes there with Patsy to warn him.

They can't find Mickey, because he is fighting under an alias, but they meet Brad and his sister Mrs. Trudy Wendell of Dover, his Harvard roommate Whit Prentiss, and Jane Prentiss, Whit's cousin, society debutante, who thinks she owns Brad, even if he has his doubts.

Charmed by Sheila Mrs. Wendell asks her and Patsy to join them in ringside seats. Mickey finally appears too late for Sheila to do anything about it and knocks out Young Mackey—much to the disgust of Big Gus Mornick who is also sitting ringside.

Gus, who masquerades as a "sportsman," tries to sign Mickey up to a fight contract, but is balked by Sheila. Later, Sheila, Patsy and Mickey accompany Brad's party to the Towne club, where Brad asks Sheila to the Harvard-Dartmouth game. This conflicts with a date with Jerry for the Boston College-Detroit game, but, when Jerry fails to appear on game day, Sheila goes with Brad. After dinner downtown, they wind up at Trudy's Dover mansion, where Brad wins Sheila's sympathy by an earnest profession of love. Angry at Jerry, she lets Brad kiss her, and is surprised to find herself swept away by a gust of emotion.

She waited for Brad to stop, but he only grinned and stepped up the speed another notch.

With a lurch they slowed for the circle at Arborway, straightened out and continued on Center. Just after they passed the soldier's monument, Brad made a sharp turn right, and they suddenly were on a quiet hill surrounded by houses that might have come out of the gay nineties.

"One moment, Officer," he said. "She hasn't anything to do with this. If anyone's at fault, it's me. And she's in a hurry."

"I believe you," said the officer. "About the hurry." He turned his light on Sheila. "Well, you're sober, all right. But if you're going anywhere in a rush, you'll have to take a cab or something. Because your boy friend is likely to be tied up for quite awhile."

Sheila hesitated. She couldn't leave Brad in a jam. Especially as it was all on her account.

"Oh," she said, "can't you let him go!"

"Not unless he shows his license," said the officer, "and maybe not if he did. Better decide, lady."

Brad resolved her reluctance.

"But he must be," said Sheila, desperately. "He was here a little while ago. With a girl. And a man." That was it. The doorman surely would know Big Gus. "A man named—Mornick." Somehow, she hated to pronounce it.

But it was effective, at least in changing the doorman's attitude.

"Is that who you're looking for?" he exclaimed, all apologies. "Whyn't you say so? A youngish fellow with black hair. Why, say, it ain't two minutes since he went out of here! Him and Big Gus. It's a wonder you didn't see 'em. Say, they might still be around. Didja see a big sedan parked out in front?"

Without realizing it, Sheila has walked into Big Gus' downtown stronghold—the headquarters for Boston rackets and racketeers. And where is Mickey? Was it Mickey, after all, that she saw with Big Gus? Startling revelations mark tomorrow's chapter of this fact-based story of a young Boston girl enmeshed by destiny in social and political conflict.

GIRL About TOWN

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

Marguerite Downey

To make New England another St. Moritz is the goal of Alex Bright, a State street broker. And he seems well on his way toward realizing his dream. To date his most outstanding achievement has been promoting a tramway up Cannon Mountain in Franconia Notch.

In both summer and winter the basket-shaped aerial railway will operate, whisking twenty-seven passengers to the mountain top. To the skier the project will be a terrific boom, permitting him to compete 20,000 to 30,000 feet in downhill work, approximately six times more work than previously.

The broker sees positive value in the tramway's value in developing a downhill racing team for the next Olympic competition. If a summer [illegible] is your idea of outdoor life the tramway will offer you an endless playground and a mahogany tan.

Construction of the railway was started in May, 1937, and is due for completion in June. The entire project has been practically the work of Mr. Bright, who [illegible]

Perhaps no "canned" contrivance could have given exactly the same effect as that we heard from a group of practiced experts ringing in a choir of bells in the perfect synchronism and timing which only knowledge of the long tradition of their craft could produce.

"Where did you hear such strange [illegible] about me?" he asked, with [illegible] the glimmer of a smile.

"There seems to be an idea among some people that you have been [illegible] the part of a civilized [illegible] only your happy hunting grounds have been more the capitals of Europe rather than the wild [illegible]."

"Lawrence," [illegible] "was one of the [illegible] explorers of the world. He had that extraordinary facility with languages which seems to come only to men who have lived on the borders of civilization.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
18 BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1938

AUSTEN LAKE

AUSTEN LAKE

ON FEBRUARY 23, WHEN THE BOSTON BEES shove off to Florida for winter training, Time and Tradition will brush back its curtains for a peep at the past. To all except three of the Bees' entourage, the town of Bradenton will be just another griddle on which to fry off their winter's fat. But to Bob Quinn, Danny MacFayden and Duffy Lewis the return to that training spot will come as a sentimental handshake through the years. For when they last saw Bradenton it was 1929 and Bob was president of the raggety Red Sox and pawning his life insurance to pasture a herd of psychopathic juniors who were less like a major league team than delinquent goofies on a holiday outing. Danny was a boy wonder, adept both in pitching and the precocious nonsense of his set. And Duffy was a gentleman wanderer and wealthy camp follower who had no portfolio other than a wistful love for baseball society

Life in the Red Sox Nursery

COMPARED WITH THE RED SOX OF Carrigan's day in Bradenton, the Bees are models of dignity. This Spring there will be no sudden midnight summons of the fire wagons to answer the whim of some kid outfielder. Elderly lady residents in the Dixie Grande Hotel will not come upon night shirt parades, the kitchen cook will not have to padlock the larder, passing pedestrians will not have to dodge water-filled paper bags thrown from the upper levels, and Bob can sleep with no headful of worries about being hauled out of bed to bail some inebriate pitcher from the town jailhouse

[illegible]

Danny Was a Kid Caution!

MacFAYDEN DID HIS SHARE OF dropping bull frogs, grass serpents and other livestock down the pants of the other scholars and the training seances would turn into schoolyard scuffles with the children hog-tieing each other on the diamond or chasing around the countryside with shirt tails streaming and elbows flapping. And sometimes, in the heat of a practice game, the boys would let their limbs go soft and spraddle after ground hits in rubbery-legged antics like their joints had come undone. And then, while Carrigan clucked his tongue like a he-hen and Bob foamed up to a froth, the kiddies would squeal and start firing clods of infield turf. So, I have no doubt that Bob will do some unhappy recollecting of those dead, but not dear, days when he sits on the sunbleached stands at Bradenton this Spring and looks out over the center field cow pastures where the boys once played hookey in the grass.

Assurance to Methodist Mothers

THE ALL TIME HIGH FOR HOODLIGANISM at Bradenton would be the night that the late Ed Morris swallowed a jug of sheepdip and declared a one-man war on the town's police force. Ed was finally overcome and stored in the bastille, which was a cell-block atop the courthouse from whence, next day, he waved greetings to his playmates as they trooped to morning exercises.

I mention this to show how, to three of the current Bees the return to Bradenton will come as a sentimental handshake through the years. And also to reassure the Methodist mothers of that river town that they will no longer have to lock away their daughters after dark lest they be ogled and chin-chucked on the curbstones. The Bees of this Anno Domini are mature, well behaved, docile and dignified characters who will not be easily discernible from the town's tourist population, and the only survivor of the old Red Sox kids is MacFayden who has become a tactful elder, noted for composure and professional intelligence. The rest have been scattered these many years. Ruffing is with the Yankees, Rogell is with Detroit, Morris is dead, Rothrock, Russell and Regan are in the minor leagues or retired and the nursery days at Bradenton are far behind.

So, when Quinn takes his Bees south next month he goes with no risk of feeling his head fill with steam while wondering whether, by law, he can shoot some of his would-be pennant puppies.

Today the Boston Bees are men.

"Listen here, you birds, don't let that win go to your heads" advised Art Ross when the Bruins started to act up a little this morning after beating the Red Wings 6 to 2, at the Garden.

"Why, Gov. Dummer Academy could spot that outfit three goals and still take them," continued Ross who is still burning up over the 6 to 2 setback his Bruins received from Cecil Hart's Flying Frenchmen in Montreal Saturday.

"I'm sorry for Jack Adams but it looks as though the Red Wings have had their wings clipped. They didn't even have one good wing to fly on.

"So there's no occasion for any of you patting yourself on the back. And you might bear in mind that if you finish second to the Canucks Sunday night, I'll do some patting with one of Shore's short horn sticks.

"I'm all fed up watching you take it on the chin from those Frenchmen. So get busy and see if you can't turn in a real game of hockey for a change, against a real hockey club," Ross concluded.

Quinn and Collins Thumbs Down On Bonuses

By JOE CASHMAN

BOSTON BASEBALL NEWS so far this week has been largely confined to the doings of Somerville Danny MacFayden, who started his big league pitching career as a Red Sox, failed to thrive as a Yankee and has done right well since the Bees saved him from being ticketed to the bushes two years back.

JOE CASHMAN

First, the bespectacled "Deacon" announced he'd steal a march on all other Boston players by starting South next Monday.

Then, after a talk with Bob Quinn, which lasted exactly three minutes by the clock, he grabbed the nearest pen and signed a contract, thus becoming the first Boston player to enter the fold for 1938.

Dan, though, doesn't rate any special credit for being the first local player to sign. He had no competition.

The rest of the Bees are still waiting for the postman to deliver their contracts, and the Red Sox documents won't be placed in the mail until next week.

The big boys are really easier for him to bring down, Dutton explains. He sort of hunches over and comes up under them and, more often than not, they wind up sitting on the ice.

Al's [illegible] now, so he's no rookie. And he seems to be hitting harder than ever. Perhaps he stands out so because body checking is becoming a lost art. Players today are afraid to body check because they're afraid of penalties. But not Murray. The only penalties he gets come when he tries to stop a man who has got around him, when he trips or hooks him. His body checks always are clean.

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

Even the wildest of race track plungers never took as great a financial risk as McCoy did when he climbed through the ropes at the Goodwin Club's show to try and prove that Lenglet's two-round knockout over him in Montreal was just a bad break in boxing luck.

McCoy's entire ring future depended on what showing he would make against Lenglet in the return bout. If he won, he could continue upwards on the fistic ladder and might eventually secure a world's championship bout with Joe Louis. Such a boxing program would be worth at least $250,000 and if he should defeat Louis he would net $1,000,000.

A defeat by Lenglet meant ring oblivion. McCoy would then be just another heavyweight, and would have to be satisfied with what financial bones the promoters cared to toss his way.

McCoy realized all this and his heart probably beat a bit fast as he waited for the gong to ring for the opening of the first round. Boxers tell me the greatest strain they experience is while they are waiting in the ring to sweep into action. Once they are tossing leather the nervous tension breaks, and they become athletes with a definite objective.

The nervous strain is greater in a bout where a boxer will be pushed out of the fistic picture if he loses.

McCoy met the mental test, and then went out and by using his brains as well as his physical power scored a decisive victory over the heavy hitting Lenglet.

It was a similar type of battle that enabled Gene Tunney to twice defeat Jack Dempsey. A straight left hand when intelligently used will always overcome sheer power

Budge Willing To Turn Pro

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (INS)—Don Budge, world's champion amateur tennis player, cabled James J. Johnston, former matchmaker of Madison Square Garden, that he was interested in the latter's offer to him to become a professional.

"Offer sounds good. Would like to hear more on my return to the States. Returning March 1. Regards." (Signed) Budge.

This is the first indication the public has had that Budge is openly considering offers to turn pro. Recently his parents suggested that he take such a step.

Esposito Entered In Golden Gloves

Esposito will bring a big howling cheering section of over 100 members of his club in Roxbury to root him home against a classy field in the 126 pound class. Esposito has been a standout in amateur boxing tournaments this season.

With Ray Fournier in the 112's, Mike Dalton in the 118's and a long list of flashy entries from all over New England, the first of four eliminations in the Dilboy Golden Gloves should provide plenty of fireworks.

Boxing will be in the eight championship classes—112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160, 175 and heavyweight.

Hall, Club President, Would Hog All Derby Prizes

The ever reliable Rhode Island Skating Club, one of the main factors in the success of the annual speed skating classic, comes in today with a list of more than 25 entries for the big January 23 Silver Skates Derby to be held at the Garden.

Lew Hall, club president, writes that the R. I. S. C. is more than ever out to capture top prizes in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser carnival.

"Here we are at last," Hall writes. "We finally have our little lambs together for your big party at Boston Garden."

And then the energetic prexy goes into a descriptive brief on each entry, all of them very much to the point. We quote:

CIGARS SCALLIN

John Hatten, student at Pawtucket High, and expecting to be in the Garden high.

Lloyd Des Roches, a youth making rapid strides in title circles. Skating but three years, recently captured second place in the famed Newburgh, N. Y. classic.

ANOTHER KIT KLEIN

Ernest Graham, we bit of a lad from Pawtucket.

Mullevey Helps Cashman Motor Up Ladder

Battling for second position in the Brookline League at the Commonwealth alleys, the Cashman Motor Club and Tux teams put up one of the very closest and exciting matches of the season, in which the former won by the narrow margin of 1633 to 1630.

The result moved the Cashmans into the desired second place by one point in the league standing.

How the pins did fly.

Mullevey was the high three-string man of the evening, getting 355, while Foster, of the Cashmans, connected for 338, the best for his aggregation.

In the initial string of the match Cashman scored 568 to 563 for the opposition. The verdict was in doubt right into the last box, the Tux boys striving for the total pinfall to make the match a tie.

Tappy Couture Real Bowler

Wears Out Three Pin Boys in Ordeal

OAKLAND, R. I., Jan. 12 (AP)—"Tappy" Couture, a weaver for the Uxbridge Worsted Company, has completed a new kind of marathon—by bowling for 31 consecutive hours.

He wore out three pin boys and two tally keepers, and his manager got so tired he went home to bed, leaving his son in charge.

Couture started bowling at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and bowled through the night and all the next day. He quit at 8:10 p. m. the second day in order to join members of his bowling team who had a match in an adjacent alley.

"Tappy" chalked up 279 strings for an average of 98; the total pinfall was 27,453; he made 59 strikes and 412 spares. He rolled 25,500 pounds of balls down the alley.

Yvon Meditates On Return Bout With Danno

O'Mahony Fans Insist He Was Robbed in Last Battle

Promoter Paul Bowser yesterday held a long conference with Yvon Robert, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, and his manager, Eddie Quinn, trying to persuade the handsome French-Canadian youth to defend his title against Danno O'Mahony at Boston Garden on Friday night, January 21.

"Robert didn't say he would take on Danno, neither did he say he would not," Bowser announced after the conference. "However he prefers meeting somebody else. Both Robert and Quinn have asked me to give them 24 hours in which to mull over the offer."

WANTS GUARANTEE

Robert has asked a guarantee from Bowser, declaring he could get it to meet O'Mahony in his native Montreal. Bowser declares he will not give a guarantee, but is willing to allow Robert something for training expenses and give him the champion's 37½ per cent. O'Mahony already has agreed to take the match for the challenger's 12½ per cent.

It is believed Robert will take the match, since he again is in a hot seat with the American Wrestling Association. That organization recognizes him as world's heavyweight champion but decrees that he meet O'Mahony before he wrestles anybody else in Boston, because of the unsatisfactory ending in their recent meeting.

DANNO UNLUCKY

In their other match here, about a month ago, each had won a fall when Robert's fist knocked out Referee Al Morelli. With Morelli unconscious, O'Mahony pinned Robert for what should have been the deciding fall. Later, when the referee had regained consciousness, Robert had O'Mahony's shoulders pinned and this time Morelli called it. It nearly caused a riot of O'Mahony's supporters, who believe Danno was robbed of the championship.

Jack McGrath, manager of Danno, protested to the American Wrestling Association, but that organization answered it would abide by the referee's decision.

There is intense rivalry between Yvon and Danno and their followers. They have collided five times. Danno won twice and drew once in their first three meetings, all in Boston. Robert won the fourth in Montreal a year ago last summer, the title changing hands. Then in their recent meeting here, Robert was the winner.

And Eddie Collins is equally strong in his opposition to this particular type of document.

"OFFERING A PLAYER a bonus hinging on attendance or receipts, gives him the right to inspect a club's books. I think that's ridiculous," chirps Collins, and he's echoing Quinn's sentiments.

"Bonuses based on performances are just as unwise. They cause all sorts of friction on a ball club.

"A pitcher seeking a certain number of wins is anxious to avoid facing tough clubs, and if he needs two or three victories more in the closing days of a campaign to gain a bonus he feels the management is plotting against him to save money if he isn't given an opportunity to work out of turn to reach his goal.

"A hitter who needs a .325 average for extra money is very likely to come up with an ailment which keeps him out of action for the remainder of the season if he happens to reach Labor Day hitting .330."

Everything the local magnates say in indicting the bonus system rings true. From surface appearances, at any rate, a club has everything to lose and nothing to gain by issuing such contracts.

Yet the managements of the White Sox, Senators and a few other clubs keep on drawing them up.

It seems inevitable, though, that all of this minority group will get burned and finally see the folly of the practice.

The Cleveland Indian bosses used to favor bonuses. Earl Averill cured them.

The Indians' slugging flychaser received $15,000 one season and played $15,000 ball.

But it was one of those years when the depression had ceased to be funny, and when it came time to sign him up again, the management sent him a contract for $7500, hoping he'd compromise for some sum between $10,000 and $12,000.

He'd sign for $9,000 and a bonus for home runs.

FOR EVERY HOME RUN from No. 20 to No. 25, he'd get $200 a wallop, which would mean an $11,000 salary for 25 round trippers.

For each homer from No. 25 to No. 30, he'd get $500 each, which, in the event he came through, would bring his earnings to $13,500.

For each home run over 30, he'd get $1000 each.

He offered the schedule to Billy Evans and asked the then Indians business manager what he thought of it.

"I'd say we'd be daffy to accept it, and I'll tell the powers-that-be so," said Billy. And he did.

But President Alva Bradley & Co. thought it a great break for them.

They argued they were getting Averill much cheaper than they had dreamed and opined that if he hit enough home runs to get a big salary, his hitting would draw enough people into the park to pay the bonus several times over.

Evans contended that Averill's home runs wouldn't keep the turnstiles clicking if the Indians weren't in the race. But he was tut-tutted.

One day, Washington was leading the Indians 12 to 1 when Averill stepped up to face "Lefty" Stewart, whose slow hook was always rank poison to the Indian slugger.

But this time Earl got a fast ball and slammed it over the fence. He repeated in the eighth frame.

Two homers, worthless to the Indians that day, but worth $400 to Averill.

Collects $1000 on Homer

BY JULY 4, EARL had his 20 home runs and his $10,000 salary. He quickly ran off the five round-trippers worth $200 each.

By now, the Indians were far out of the pennant running, and the fans were conspicuous by their absence at the Cleveland Park.

But the Averill homers became more expensive.

One afternoon, when there was less than $1000 in the house, Bradley and Evans sat in a box and watched Averill hit three homers that cost the Cleveland club $1500. Bradley was sick for the rest of the year.

To cut a long story short, Averill kept on clearing the barriers until he had collected two $1000 homers, bringing his total to 32 and his salary to $15,500, or $500 above his previous season's figures.

That was around Labor Day.

He didn't hit another homer that fall. Evans relates he saw him walk more than once on pitches he might have bashed out of the lot had he swung at them.

But even then the Indians were getting a licking. They were getting walks when they might have been getting home runs.

As Bob Quinn says, there ought to be a law against bonus contracts.

Regimentation Seen Gaining By Haney

Regards New Auto Law in Jersey as Another Step

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

(Special to Boston Evening American)

NEW YORK, Jan. 12—My home state, New Jersey, is all stirred up over the enforcement of an automobile inspection law.

Twice a year, every owner has to drive to an inspection place, wait in line, and pay 50 cents to get an official sticker indicating that his lights, brakes, wheel alignment, etc., are satisfactory to the state officials.

Everybody agreed that the announced purpose is desirable.

But probably, drinking alcohol is responsible directly and indirectly for at least as much trouble as faulty headlights and brakes. Why, then, not occasionally inspect drivers for alcoholic content?

The question is, is this the best method? Does it bring troubles and dangers that offset what it accomplishes? I am not sure.

What I do know is that I must pay another dollar of my annual income to "government."

I am put to great inconvenience. I am then turned loose on the streets for six months with the idea that my car is in perfect condition, which is very dangerous.

The main question, however, is where are we going to draw the line? Obviously, this nuisance twice a year cannot possibly make driving safer, and I predict that we will find no results in reduced accidents.

Will the next step, therefore, be for the government to service our cars completely at frequent intervals? Will we then go on to "pool" our cars by having the government furnish each of us with a "standard" car?

And why not a chauffeur for those of us who don't drive so well?

Then, perhaps, we could all be happy about the whole thing! (No, it would still be necessary to instal speed-control devices in all cars—and have them inspected!)

Isn't this just another step along the road to regimentation? Are we figuring on any limit?

Already we are trying to give "security" to everybody, with little regard for what he has done to earn it.

There are twin children in the collectivist family of which "social planning" is the father and "social security" is the mother; one is public debt and the other is unemployment.

It is an old saying that "what's everybody's business is nobody's business." This is one great weakness of "government" planning and control. "The government" is, in fact, just the individuals who hold office.

When "the government" undertakes to manage our lives, everybody (through some representative) is trying to run everybody else. This is futile.

Brookmire Sees Recovery in '38

Analysis Emphasizes That Confidence Should Be Keyword to Progress

Recovery—natural or inflationary—sums up the probability for this year, according to The Brookmire Annual Forecaster, which emphasizes that in 1938 confidence should be the keyword to a year of renewed progress toward prosperity.

Economic Health in the past year was weakened more by the poison of fear than by the seriousness of previous "excesses." It can be effectively restored this year, continues the analysis, by use of the tonic, Confidence. Revived confidence of capital must impart redoubled vigor to Recovery by breathing new life into dormant expansion potentialities, or the government may resort increasingly to inflationary measures.

In either event, but notably with traditional interplay of private capital and individual enterprise, the year should reflect definite recovery.

Business, commodity prices, stocks, bonds, should all reflect improvement resultant from government action, a construction revival, continuation of cheap money, and improving foreign trade. Brookmire Previews of 1938 follow:

Inflationary probabilities are being heightened. The national budget deficit threatens to be increased again by mounting relief and armament spending. Failure to restore confidence would intensify the unemployment problem and crystallize the threat of further inflationary steps.

GOVERNMENT ACTION

Government action can and probably will play a leading role in revitalizing basic recovery forces in 1938 by stressing encouragement to business and capital—in part, by making taxes less stifling of capital expansion. Attainment of the broad objective—long-term confidence—would induce private enterprise to grasp the manifold latent opportunities for capital expansion.

Construction revival—particularly residential, would make headway under restored confidence, in response to a growing housing shortage, government aids, and lowering costs. The second half of 1938 is expected to score pronounced gains over the last half of 1937.

Machinery and equipment industries, the second major avenue of capital expansion, will benefit as confidence renews the urge to replace old high-cost units with efficient types. Railway and electrical equipment industries will be conspicuous beneficiaries of a recovery drive.

Foreign trade promises to be given impetus by additional reciprocal trade agreements, especially one currently under negotiation with England.

Labor is likely to be more tractable; union disputes less widespread, and costs reduced—slightly by wage cuts, notably by increased efficiency of workers and machinery.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Business is expected to average lower than the whole of 1937 but should move upward in 1938. The indicated pattern is a rebound in the early months; irregularity until the second half; and, with expected government encouragement, distinct upward momentum in the later months of the year.

Commodity prices should turn upward. Industrial materials, with the benefit of reduced inventories, are expected to begin a rise which should accelerate as consumption is broadened by capital expansion. More potent inflationary measures, should they occur, would bring sharper advances.

Money rates will probably remain low throughout this year. Demand for loans will be light in the first half; and, while rising later, is not likely to cause more than firming of interest rates.

Bonds promise to recover further as returning confidence impels investment of idle funds. The longer-term downtrend will be resumed, no doubt, as demand for capital ultimately raises interest rates, but not appreciably so, this year. Barring unforeseen drastic inflationary measures, relative stability can be expected.

STOCKS SHOULD IMPROVE

Stocks indicate a reversal of their 1937 action. Progress may be irregular; but notwithstanding the possibility of an important interruption in the first half, the main trend for the year should be upward in response to prospects of improving business and earnings. As the government's anticipated recovery program is vigorously pursued, or in the event of direct inflation, sufficient momentum may be gained to propel stocks well toward 1937 highs.

Bankers Blame Deal for U. S. Economic Ills

Aldrich, Perkins Insist Changes in Policy Only Remedy

By B. C. FORBES

Heads of America's two largest banks, Chairman Winthrop W. Aldrich, of the Chase National Bank, and Chairman James H. Perkins, of the National City Bank of New York, yesterday addressed their stockholders on national conditions and problems.

Mr. Aldrich, who has earned a reputation for fearless outspokenness, was much the more critical of government policies. He declares they are in no small measure responsible for the recurrence of unsatisfactory conditions and expansion in unemployment.

Selected sentences from these authorities give insight into A. B. C. economics, as interpreted by them.

Says Mr. Aldrich:

"It is an economic truism that increases in savings in relation to population, and an economically productive use of the savings fund, will result in higher living standards. If a retardation occurs in the growth of the savings fund, if the savings fund is used non-productively, if the volume of capital willing to assume risk is greatly reduced, if capital equipment is not maintained, a deterioration in living standards can be expected.

"Savings are by one means or another being diverted to meeting the expenditures of governmental authorities, which all too frequently are of a sterile character.

"Taxation at extremely high rates has operated to dissipate the capital of the community.

"A prompt and adequate modification of government policy regarding the capital market would make a major contribution to business revival."

* * *

Mr. Aldrich also recommends revision of the capital gains tax, outright repeal of the undistributed profits tax, reconsideration of the SEC law governing the issuance of securities.

As to the outlook, Mr. Aldrich says:

"The rapidity of the decline is in itself a hopeful sign. It means that, in many lines, we have certainly overdone the contraction of production, that there has not been the weakening of the financial structure or the exhaustion of the savings of the people which a more prolonged decline of similar magnitude would have brought about."

What caused business activity recently to toboggan?

Mr. Perkins, after mentioning the "natural slackening after the forward buying and stocking-up of inventories last spring" as important among the immediate causes, cites these other three "of deeper" significance: One, the increased cost of production; two, the ending of the inflationary support previously given to business by the government's deficit financing; and, three, the effect of existing uncertainties in retarding the flow of savings into new industries and private enterprise.

"History will show that a heavily taxed community is never in the long run a prosperous community.

"The moment an increase in labor costs raises the price of goods beyond the capacity of consumers to buy, trade and employment necessarily decline and labor, instead of gaining, has lost.

"In July, 1937, according to the National Industrial Conference Board, the labor cost per unit of manufacturing output was 19.3 per cent higher than one year earlier.

"I know of no corporation of size that could put out an issue of common stock today with any hope of a successful flotation, unless offered below its fair value.

"We must produce more to have more, and distribute the greater production among all groups of the population through lowering costs in order that prices may be within reach of all."

Mr. Perkins concludes, however:

"I am an optimist in that I believe the solution of our problems is well within our ability."

But must not the "our" most essentially include the nation's overlords at Washington?

Commodity Rise Seen In Future

Inflation Seen as Principal Force Behind Prices

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

One of the peculiarities of the current, and recently past, commodity price cycle is that it is one of the few in the nation's history in which the trend has been so essentially inflationary. And since this influence that works for erratic movements seems more likely to become stronger rather than weaker in the future, it requires little courage to forecast a new term of higher prices some time in the future.

At this writing dates alone are the uncertain factor and it seems reasonably certain that the average observer who keeps posted on Washington affairs as suggested here yesterday can come reasonably close to calling them when the need arises. Business, despite the great improvement prior to early 1937, failed to reach normal by a good margin and two courses are open. The natural inflation of stimulation through encouragement of laggard industries such as heavy electrical equipment manufacture and construction or the deliberate whipping up of all industry through deliberate inflation because legislative forces bent on reform feel that private capital, in reality frightened, is frustrating their aims. Either, and of course the latter is by far the more preferable, will bring expansion of commodity prices.

BUSINESS TRENDS

Business started off the year at the lowest level since 1935. The weekly business trend compiled by the Administrative and Research Corporation which we like to follow slumped some 5 points between the week ending January 1 and December 25. It is all attributed by some to holiday curtailment and the usual year-end slackness prompted by inventory taking. Perhaps that is the story, but the year before the index turned off in December, but up in early January. Inventory and holiday arguments have been worked to death. Carloadings tell the true story. They are at the lowest level since the end of 1934.

If there is a story of any merit to be extracted from business index figures we are convinced that it is not in apologizing for or trying to cover them up but in recognizing the obvious fact declines have run to levels where a new recovery can begin. Internal conditions are propitious and all that is needed is a little of the same externally. However that may be, natural forces alone seem almost sure to bring something of an upturn in the weeks to come and all one can do is hope that events conspire to make it permanent.

MARKET STUDY

In studying the present status of the market there is little to add to our comments of yesterday and the day before. Industrial stocks have made their way through resistance and it is now up to the rails. They have failed traders and investors so often in the recent past that few have any faith in their ability now. Advance hints will be few and far between. About all one can do is watch for a downturn in carriers from just under previous highs on volume. A more lackadaisical movement will suggest, if not indicate, another and later attempt on their part to confirm the action of industrials.

N. E. Store Sales Off in December

For New England as a whole December sales of department stores—reflecting chiefly Christmas business—were down 4.2 per cent from a year ago, with all states but Connecticut showing a decline.

Boston had a drop of 3.5 per cent from last year. New England for all of 1937 showed an increase of 1.7 per cent over 1936, all the gain having come in early months.

Power Output Under 1937

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended January 8 rose to 2,139,582,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 7.1 per cent over revised output for the preceding week of 1,998,135,000 kilowatt hours, but a drop of 4.7 per cent from 2,244,030,000 kilowatt hours in the comparable 1937 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The advance, however, was less than seasonally expected and the Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-30 taken as 100, touched a new 1937-38 low at 109.9. The index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, was revised to 111.8 for the previous week. A year ago it stood at 117.6.

	1937-38	1936	1935	1934	1933
High	125.2	119.8	106.5	97.4	91.9
Low	109.9	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

United Air Lines Traffic Below 1936

United Air Lines flew approximately 4,200,000 revenue passenger miles in December as compared with 5,561,009 in November and 7,755,566 in December, 1936.

For the year 1937, United Air Lines flew 97,578,794 revenue passenger miles as compared with 108,048,002 in 1936 and 87,173,551 in 1935. Revenue plane miles flown totaled 16,260,000 in 1937, against 18,616,208 in 1936 and 14,855,108 in 1935 and 200,000 revenue passengers were carried against 221,072 in 1936 and 177,457 in 1935.

Selected Groups In Narrow Range

Profit Selling Appears After Opening

NEW YORK, Jan. 12—Selected groups achieved narrow advances in today's stock market, but most leaders held about even.

Near the fourth hour gains and losses of fractions to around a point were scattered throughout the list. Rails, utilities and gold mining stocks appeared in favor and most of the advances were recorded in these groups.

Large blocks changed hands in an active opening with the tendency to the upside. Later profit realization entered the picture and activity slowed.

Higher much of the time—extreme gains were shaved in many instances—were Consolidated Edison, American Water Works, Public Service of New Jersey, Santa Fe, New York Central, Great Northern, Dome Mines, McIntyre Porcupine, International Nickel and American Can.

Chrysler, with a large force returning to work in the company's plants today, went counter to the general trend of motors with a small gain. New York traction issues likewise held fair advances.

FOREIGN MARKETS SAG

Foreign markets sagged, with transatlantic issues generally lower at the close. Commodities pointed lower and bonds were mixed.

Traders displayed interest in the forthcoming meeting, set for January 19, between the President and 90 members of the national advisory business council. It was expected that at that time definite recommendations for halting the current business recession would be laid before the Chief Executive.

A cheerful note was sounded in Cleveland with disclosure that foreign machine tool orders had increased sharply recently, although domestic bookings had fallen off somewhat. A broadening of demand for cotton goods was noted.

Heaviness in the copper shares was attributed to a drop in that metal in the London market and a consequent easing of export quotations.

Testimony before the Senate unemployment committee that the carriers could put 150,000 men back to work if revenues were increased helped this group. Utilities were bolstered by hopes of power company-administration co-operation.

There was some evidence of switching from the heavy industry shares, so popular in recent rallies, to the utilities.

CURRENT TOPICS

Studied in board rooms during the day was the overnight report from Washington that five leading industrialists, after a conference with President Roosevelt, had forecast closer cooperation between government and business in overcoming the business regression.

About as expected was the statement of Iron Age that, while steel companies "expect business to improve somewhat over the present low volume, no rapid acceleration in demand over the next month or two is indicated." The publication said that although the rate of mill operations had increased this week, "no definite trend in new business had developed."

Disappointing were the figures of the Edison Electric Institute showing electric power output for the week ended Jan. 8 had advanced less than seasonally expected.

At the beginning of foreign exchange dealings Sterling was quoted at $4.99⅞, off ⅛ of a cent. The French franc, at 3.38⅛ cents, was down .00⅛ of a cent.

Fisher, 31, Heads $400,000,000 Detroit Bank

By JACK VINCENT

International News Service Staff Correspondent

DETROIT, Jan. 12 (INS)—At 31, Charles T. Fisher, Jr., today was president of a $400,000,000 bank.

His election as president of the National Bank of Detroit Tuesday came in spite of, and not because of, family fortunes which, pooled, could command a billion dollars worth of wealth.

Fisher is the son of the multi-millionaire automobile pioneer and General Motors Corporation vice-president; a son-in-law of Walter O. Briggs, multi-millionaire motor car body manufacturer and owner of the Detroit Tigers, and a nephew of the six men who with his father make up the seven Fisher brothers.

The Fishers and the Briggs are two of Detroit's first families. Between them, it was estimated in financial circles here, the families control industrial empires and real estate worth at least a billion dollars.

GOLDEN SPOON

Born with a gold spoon in his mouth, Fisher has been forced all his life to fight to keep from being fed with it. The ink was hardly dry on his diploma from Georgetown University in 1929 when he started to work in a Detroit bank.

In 1931, he left private banking to accept an appointment from former President Herbert Hoover as secretary of the National Credit Corporation in Michigan, which was a Hoover agency designed to give credit to financially weak banks.

He had nearly turned down that job. When it was first offered to him he was tempted to refuse because, he said, "People will say it was because of my family." He was told "You'll prove it is your family if you refuse," so he accepted. Later, he was really on his own. That was during the days when fortunes were disappearing overnight in Detroit, and when it was what you did and not who you were that counted.

When the RFC replaced the NCC, with greatly enlarged powers, in 1932, he was appointed manager of the Detroit office. He left for a bank vice presidency but after the bank crash was drafted, this time by President Roosevelt, to work for the RFC again. In 1935, President Roosevelt promoted him by appointing him as an RFC director.

On Jan. 1, 1937, Governor Murphy appointed him Michigan state banking commissioner, the job which he resigned to take the presidency of the National Bank here—the largest bank in Michigan and the 16th largest in the nation.

SUCCEEDS McLUCAS

As president, Fisher succeeds Walter S. McLucas who was elected chairman of the board and made chief executive officer of the bank. Fisher also was named a director.

The young bank president was married in 1929 to heiress Elizabeth Briggs. It was called "a billion dollar wedding" and 2000 curious surged against police lines to get a glimpse of the couple. The Fishers have five children.

His hobbies are golf, horseback riding, good cars which he likes to drive himself and reading books and articles on banking. He smokes a pipe when he can, other times a cigarette. Often he spends long days at the office, getting to work before 9 a. m. and not leaving until 6:30 p. m.

He scoffs at being described as a superman of banking. Rather, he would like to be known as an average good man hard on the job. His work in the past has won high praise from the President, Governor Murphy and Jesse W. Jones, president of the RFC.

+ Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof; and the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.—Ecclesiastes VII., 8. +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. George H. Spencer, Episcopal minister, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Dr. H. F. Holton, Brockton.

The Editor Says:

IN CASTING off the Philippines, the United States has cast off many millions of trade.

The United States Tariff Commission declares that the act granting independence to the Philippines makes it—

". . . practically certain that the Philippines will decrease in importance as a market for American goods . . . American exports to the islands will probably decline as soon as Philippine export taxes come into operation and begin to cut down their exports . . .

"With export credits curtailed, the islands must perforce restrict their imports."

The Philippines cannot expect to eat Uncle Sam's cake and have it too. Having, with the acquiescence of Washington, made their bed, the people of the Philippines may not find it comfortable.

MUCH CAN HAPPEN

—between now and 1946. Much may happen. Long before then both parties to the separation may have thrust upon them sharp, decisive reason for undoing what has been done.

That the Philippine people will encounter difficulty in finding outlets for their products is a foregone conclusion.

That the United States may encounter military developments which could have been averted by retention of these strategic islands, it is not difficult to imagine.

ALL WORKERS AGREE

—with the New England Congressmen who have informed Secretary of State Hull that his proposed "reciprocal" trade agreement with Great Britain promises more unemployment in this part of the country.

Senator Lodge's comment appeals powerfully to shoe and textile workers who know that he speaks the truth when he says:

"The big trouble with our present leaders in Washington is that they seem ready to sacrifice human welfare in their pursuit of economic theories."

The proof of this lies in the fact that, included among the commodities that Mr. Hull would import in greater volume from Britain, are boots and shoes, woolen and worsted fabrics, cotton cloth and fisheries' products.

It doesn't require much intelligence to see what that competition will do to New England if Congress fails to stop it. English workers enjoy neither our short hours nor good wages. Consequently, their employers can undersell our employers right here in the United States.

And when, thanks to Mr. Hull's "treaty," they do undersell our employers, we who work for a living will walk the streets.

Mr. Hull should wake up and FACE FACTS.

A POLITICAL MIRACLE

—that is the only way to describe what has happened in New Bedford, where an official has resigned a $3300 job "because the position was superfluous and unnecessary."

The official is Gilbert L. Freitas, who until his voluntary retirement was field director of the Board of Health.

The New Bedford "miracle" is all the more miraculous when one considers that the job Mr. Freitas quits and wants abolished is the second highest paid of the city's appointive positions.

It is our suggestion that the old "City of the Whalers" give Mr. Freitas some kind of medal, preferably a gold one. He certainly is a rare official. Most men in public life would lose their right hands before they would give up $3300 a year.

We are especially interested in Mr. Freitas' reference to his work as "superfluous and unnecessary." There are probably more than a thousand jobs in this State that could be so described. Yet they continue to exist and those who hold them go on drawing their fat salaries.

The explanation is simple: Neither the Governor nor the average mayor has the courage to oust these politicians.

FOR "STYLISH STOUTS"

—is the straight-from-the-shoulder advice that comes from no less a personage than Elsa Maxwell, whose 196 pounds are the life of practically every important New York society event.

"Be yourself," says Elsa. "Wear clothes that fit. Avoid too small shoes and freak hats. And don't make the mistake of being tightly corseted. No one can be gay and be bound in like a mummy."

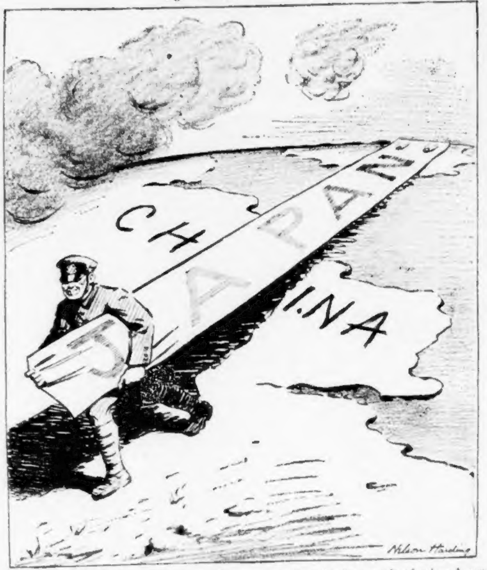
That's common sense. Being one's self is the best possible recipe for happiness and success. It matters little whether a person weighs one hundred or two hundred. Being somebody else is a futile endeavor and thoroughly impossible.

You may remodel your face to resemble another man's or woman's. But you never can know what is going on in the brain behind and above the other's face.

How Far Will the Title Stretch?

By Nelson Harding



Japan is now forcibly occupying Chinese territory a thousand miles from the sea.

Mr. Harding wonders how far Japan can go.

And so do thousands of other Americans who read newspapers.

But probably nobody wonders more than the defenseless Chinese, now paying the tragic price of national weakness.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.

EWING GALLOWAY, the photographer, raising cattle and mules down in Kentucky, has plenty of company in his back-to-land hegira. Corey Ford rarely leaves his New Hampshire acres. Earl Carroll is toying with a get-away-from-it-all ranch in the Imperial Valley.

Farming has become the chief topic among the smart talkers lunching at "No. 21" and the masked revelers at El Morocco after the play. Hendrik Van Loon spends much time gazing over his rolling acres in Connecticut. Mrs. Ring Lardner rarely leaves her rural residence.

Dorothy Parker has her farm down in the Pocahontas section of Pennsylvania. So has George S. Kaufman. Alexander Woollcott is studying soil erosion and other agricultural perplexities at his retreat in Vermont, after completely abandoning his New York citizenship.

Frank Crumit, of the radio, has refurbished an old farmhouse in Ohio for himself and Julia Sanderson. Frank Sullivan wavers between a Gramercy Park flat or following the furrows near his boyhood home at Saratoga Springs. Sinclair Lewis has gone permanently rural. So it goes.

Age of specialization: Carl Crow, now the foremost authority on China and Chinese, never saw a Chink outside the local laundryman until he was 27 years old.

The sudden oratorical ease of Robert L. Ripley over the radio and on the banquet dais is the celebrity accomplishment of the hour. Once painfully shy in facing the public, Ripley indulged many hesitations and now and then a splutter. He was about to call it a day when friends urged him to take lessons in public speaking. He devoted a year to it and now has everything under control.

Visitors to the famous Theodore Roosevelt estate at Sagamore Hill are generally astonished to find the owner had only oil lamps in his bathrooms. The colonel lost an eye and believed lamp reading conserved his sight. After his passing, the house was wired. But for some reason the bathrooms remained horse and buggy. Incidentally, the bath towels are marked "R. of S."—Roosevelt of Sagamore.

Cabaret scene: At the edge of a floor show in Harlem, a young debbie from down town was trying to appear worldly. A dainty brown-skin girl slid sinuously out on the floor, her initial movements suggesting the airy grace of a wayward breeze. The debbie lighted a cigarette and settled herself to view the number with lack-lustre eyes.

Then, like the sudden release of a steel spring, the dancer began to dance violently in front of the shocked visitor.

Startled, she began puffing furiously until the cigarette burned right down to her pearly teeth. And then she looked about helplessly as though she wished the floor would swallow her whole.

Not many of the town's cafe gallants are so ubiquitous as the nattily habited cartoonist, Ham Fisher. When he visits a restaurant or night club he does a thoroughgoing job—not sitting at one table but practically all. In the parlance, the Ham Fishers are known as "cafe flitters" and rarely stay put. Charles Bedaux, the Duke of Windsor's side kick, for a while anyway, was one of the gentry. And Elsa Maxwell is the most dexterous in the art among the feminine division.

By contrast there is the self-effacing Lee Shubert, who likes to drop in at night clubs but always sits obscurely in a darkened corner.

Tricks in all trades: The fussy codger next table sent back four dishes at dinner last evening. When he departed it was inquired of the captain: "Not much profit in that check." He replied: "Don't be ridic. He doesn't know that each time he got back the same dish, just flossed up a bit differently."

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Taxpayers had better begin to steel themselves against another raid on their pocketbooks. Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury says there is no immediate need for additional funds for relief. That is a sure sign more money for relief will be demanded. Whenever the Administration has assured the people no new taxes would be required, more taxes have been levied.

When Congress takes up the tax question, there will be talk of broadening the tax base. When it already covers everybody, how can it be broadened? There is an erroneous impression that only single persons with a net income of more than $1000 and married people with a net income of more than $2500 pay Federal taxes. The fact is that everybody pays Federal taxes whether he makes out an income tax return or not.

The Federal income tax base already has been broadened until it takes in everybody except farm workers, domestics and state and local governmental employes. The Social Security tax, for example, is an income tax on all the millions of business and industrial workers.

What's worse, it is a gross income tax. Those whose earnings are not over $3000 a year, pay a tax on every dollar they earn. Those drawing more than $3000 pay a gross income tax on the first $3000 of their salaries.

While this Social Security Tax is supposed to be for old age retirement insurance, the money collected goes into the Treasury just the same as proceeds from the regular net income tax do, and it is spent the same way. If you read President Roosevelt's budget message, you must have noticed that he included Social Security taxes among "receipts" just the same as he did other Federal taxes.

The Government spends the Social Security tax money and puts its I. O. U. into the old age insurance reserve fund.

The verdict of an Arkansas jury convicting two Negroes of a criminal assault upon a white girl attracts attention because that jury was composed of 11 white men and one Negro. One out of 11 isn't much representation, but it is unusual for the Negro race to have any representation at all in the trial of such a case.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

A LEADING German diplomat is quoted in the news as reproaching this country as "a nation of kibitzers."

"You are great starters," he said, "but you don't seem to care about finishing anything. There was the League of Nations which you left on Europe's doorsteps. Something will now have to be done with it. Germany isn't interested in reforming the League.

"But why won't America, as the begetter of the infant, step in and see to its future? You have priority rights, and it ought to be your job.

"In international affairs, is America to be the perpetual kibitzer?"

This appears to be just a bit of not too subtle Teutonic ribbing, but the same idea frequently has been stated in ornate diplomatic lingo, and it is an interesting colloquial phrasing of a widespread belief in Europe that world troubles are largely of our making, and that it's up to us to restore peace and solvency to the nations.

Our reply to the "kibitzer" accusation might well be that the kibitzer can make out a pretty good case for himself, when he notes in the game a brace deck, sanded cards, trick mirrors, a runaway ace in every boot top, everything wild and a finger on every trigger.

And if he also notes that every pot goes into the kitty to buy a new round of guns and another jug of white mule propaganda and that the blue chips don't stay blue—well, if he's only half awake and sees all this, he may, quite reasonably it would seem, decide to remain just a kibitzer, and if he's really awake, he'll jump out of the window.

Here Whoozis—he is unnamed in the dispatch—may be reminded of a yarn our covered-wagon pioneers like to tell. The prairie schooners were rolling into a far outpost on the plains, with some old scouts on the receiving line. Each pioneer, as the wagons arrived, was telling what he was going to start—this one a store, that one a mill, the other a factory.

"Well, Uncle, what are you going to start?" asked Kit Carson. "I'm goin' to start a graveyard," quavered the old man.

That's about what Europe is starting, as they invite us in and reproach us for being poor starters and poor finishers.

As a seasoned reporter of political conventions, of municipal corruption, of pork, pelf and patronage, and the one-time chronicler of the villainies of the major picaroons in our public life—as an observer of all this, which reveals democracy at its worst—I still maintain that, against the tragic back-drop of European power politics, our democracy looms up like the white towers of the enchanted City of Camelot.

And one just can't help saying to the old gentleman with the chin whiskers: "You've got something there, Sam!" And, personally, I don't think he's going to merge it with Continental Mausoleums, Ltd.

A strong, solvent, enlightened, self-governing America will, in the end, contribute infinitely more to world well-being than any blind Galahad in the European free-for-all. We would go in blindfolded. There is no rationale, no tiny window of vision, in the muddled clash of world imperialisms today.

Woodrow Wilson knew that when he led us into the World War. His League of Nations, which brings us only cynical reproach today, recorded this understanding and his great humanitarian, if futile, aspiration.

Like the Holy Roman Empire, an equally exalted hope, it failed.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

WHEN you read today how the armies of the world, when in action in Spain or China or in barracks in Europe, are clothed, fed and taken care of when wounded by tender hands, let your mind drift back to Sunday, December 19, 1777, when 11,000 tattered, sick, shoeless and halfstarving Americans came in to Valley Forge, Pa., and settled down for seven months of the most terrible hardships that are recorded in modern history.

One man had "little more than a sword to wear." Hundreds of other Continentals were forced to carry wood and water barefoot through ice and mud and snow. Hundreds were hatless and coatless and others were "clad only in patches of blankets."

"Naked and starving," reported General Washington. "Without bread for four days," another officer said.

The Bicentennial Committee of the University of Pennsylvania is erecting a college at Valley Forge to commemorate the immortal 11,000, the grandeur of whose heroic will and fortitude cannot be realized mentally but only emotionally by those who have resolved that the ideal for which these men suffered—LIBERTY—shall not perish from this land!

Professor Hooton's "APES, MEN AND MORONS" contains more of a mixture of sheer nonsense and genuine wisdom than I have run across in many a day.

Let us forget some of his foolishness, particularly his labored argument to prove that man is reverting to some layers below the ape because of the increased use of automobiles, and cheer him for this bit of sound and penetrating thinking:

"A fallacy of social ethics lies in the assumption that by a process of environmental tinkering fools may be transmuted into sages, criminals into saints and politicians into statesmen. The acquisition of knowledge to any amount does not change an inferior mind into one that is superior."

What is necessary today in America, as elsewhere in the world, is to raise the standards of public taste, thereby creating a better QUALITY of mind, instead of systematically filling people's heads full of useful "knowledge" as if their heads were public coal-bins.

Here is the sort of rubbish that the "radicals" ladle out to their green-and-soft followers:

"The United States is owned and dominated by a hierarchy of 60 of the richest families, buttressed by no more than 60 families of lesser wealth."

That is from a book by one F. Lundberg.

Here are a few FACTS.

Figures compiled by the Treasury Department show that in 1936 in 566 mutual savings banks alone in the whole country 13,000,000 depositors had $10,000,000,000 on deposit.

In 57 mutual savings banks of New York City there are at present $4,107,000,000 deposited by 4,843,326 men and women.

In New York State 6,000,000 persons have $5,250,000,000 on deposit in mutual savings banks.

That's the difference between a "glittering generality" and official figures. But what are facts to the Pink Prophets of Doom?

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.

HAVE the American people reached the point where, in their bewilderment, and deep concern over the enormous increase in cost of government, they are ready to surrender still another power to the President?

This would be the power to veto particular items in appropriation bills.

The question probably will come to a showdown at the present session of Congress. Many Presidents have sought this power. Mr. Roosevelt desires it, and the leading Republican Presidential prospect, at the moment, Senator Vandenberg, wants to amend the Constitution to give it to him.

Let us examine the psychological background for a moment. It is apparent that the courts, in this country, are growing tired of standing between the Constitution, and a Congress which is habitually shirking its responsibilities, by enacting half-baked legislation.

Many in Congress are growing tired of standing between the Constitution, and the people who are demanding more and more at the hands of government.

Hence this view may be taken, that the best way to save the situation in America, in the long run, is to save the courts from being scapegoats, and to place in the hands of the President—any President—a power to check the profligate spending by a reckless Congress, responding to insatiable popular demands.

Vandenberg believes a constitutional amendment is required to give the President power to veto particular items in supply bills.

Strangely enough, as the Michigan Republican was making his move, Speaker Bankhead—probably at White House suggestion—was asking Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, to examine the question, and Democratic Representative Taylor, of Colorado, was introducing a resolution of his own to amend the organic law.

Sumners has reported that, in his opinion, a Constitutional amendment is unnecessary, and that Congress can give this power to the President by its own act.

Now the truth probably is that the budget cannot be balanced, unless this power is given to the President.

What Republican today would want to be President, faced by monumental debt, unbalanced budget, and reckless spending, without having this power? Well, not Vandenberg!

When Mr. Roosevelt astonished the country by his demand for a packed Supreme Court, it was declared in responsible quarters at the Capitol that two members of the Supreme Court would have retired, but for that attack upon the court, and if a retirement law had been passed.

Since then two members of the court have retired. But only one of them was of the two referred to when the great Supreme Court issue was raised last year. It is believed at the Capitol that Mr. Roosevelt will soon have another Supreme Court appointment to make.
